What Can It Be?

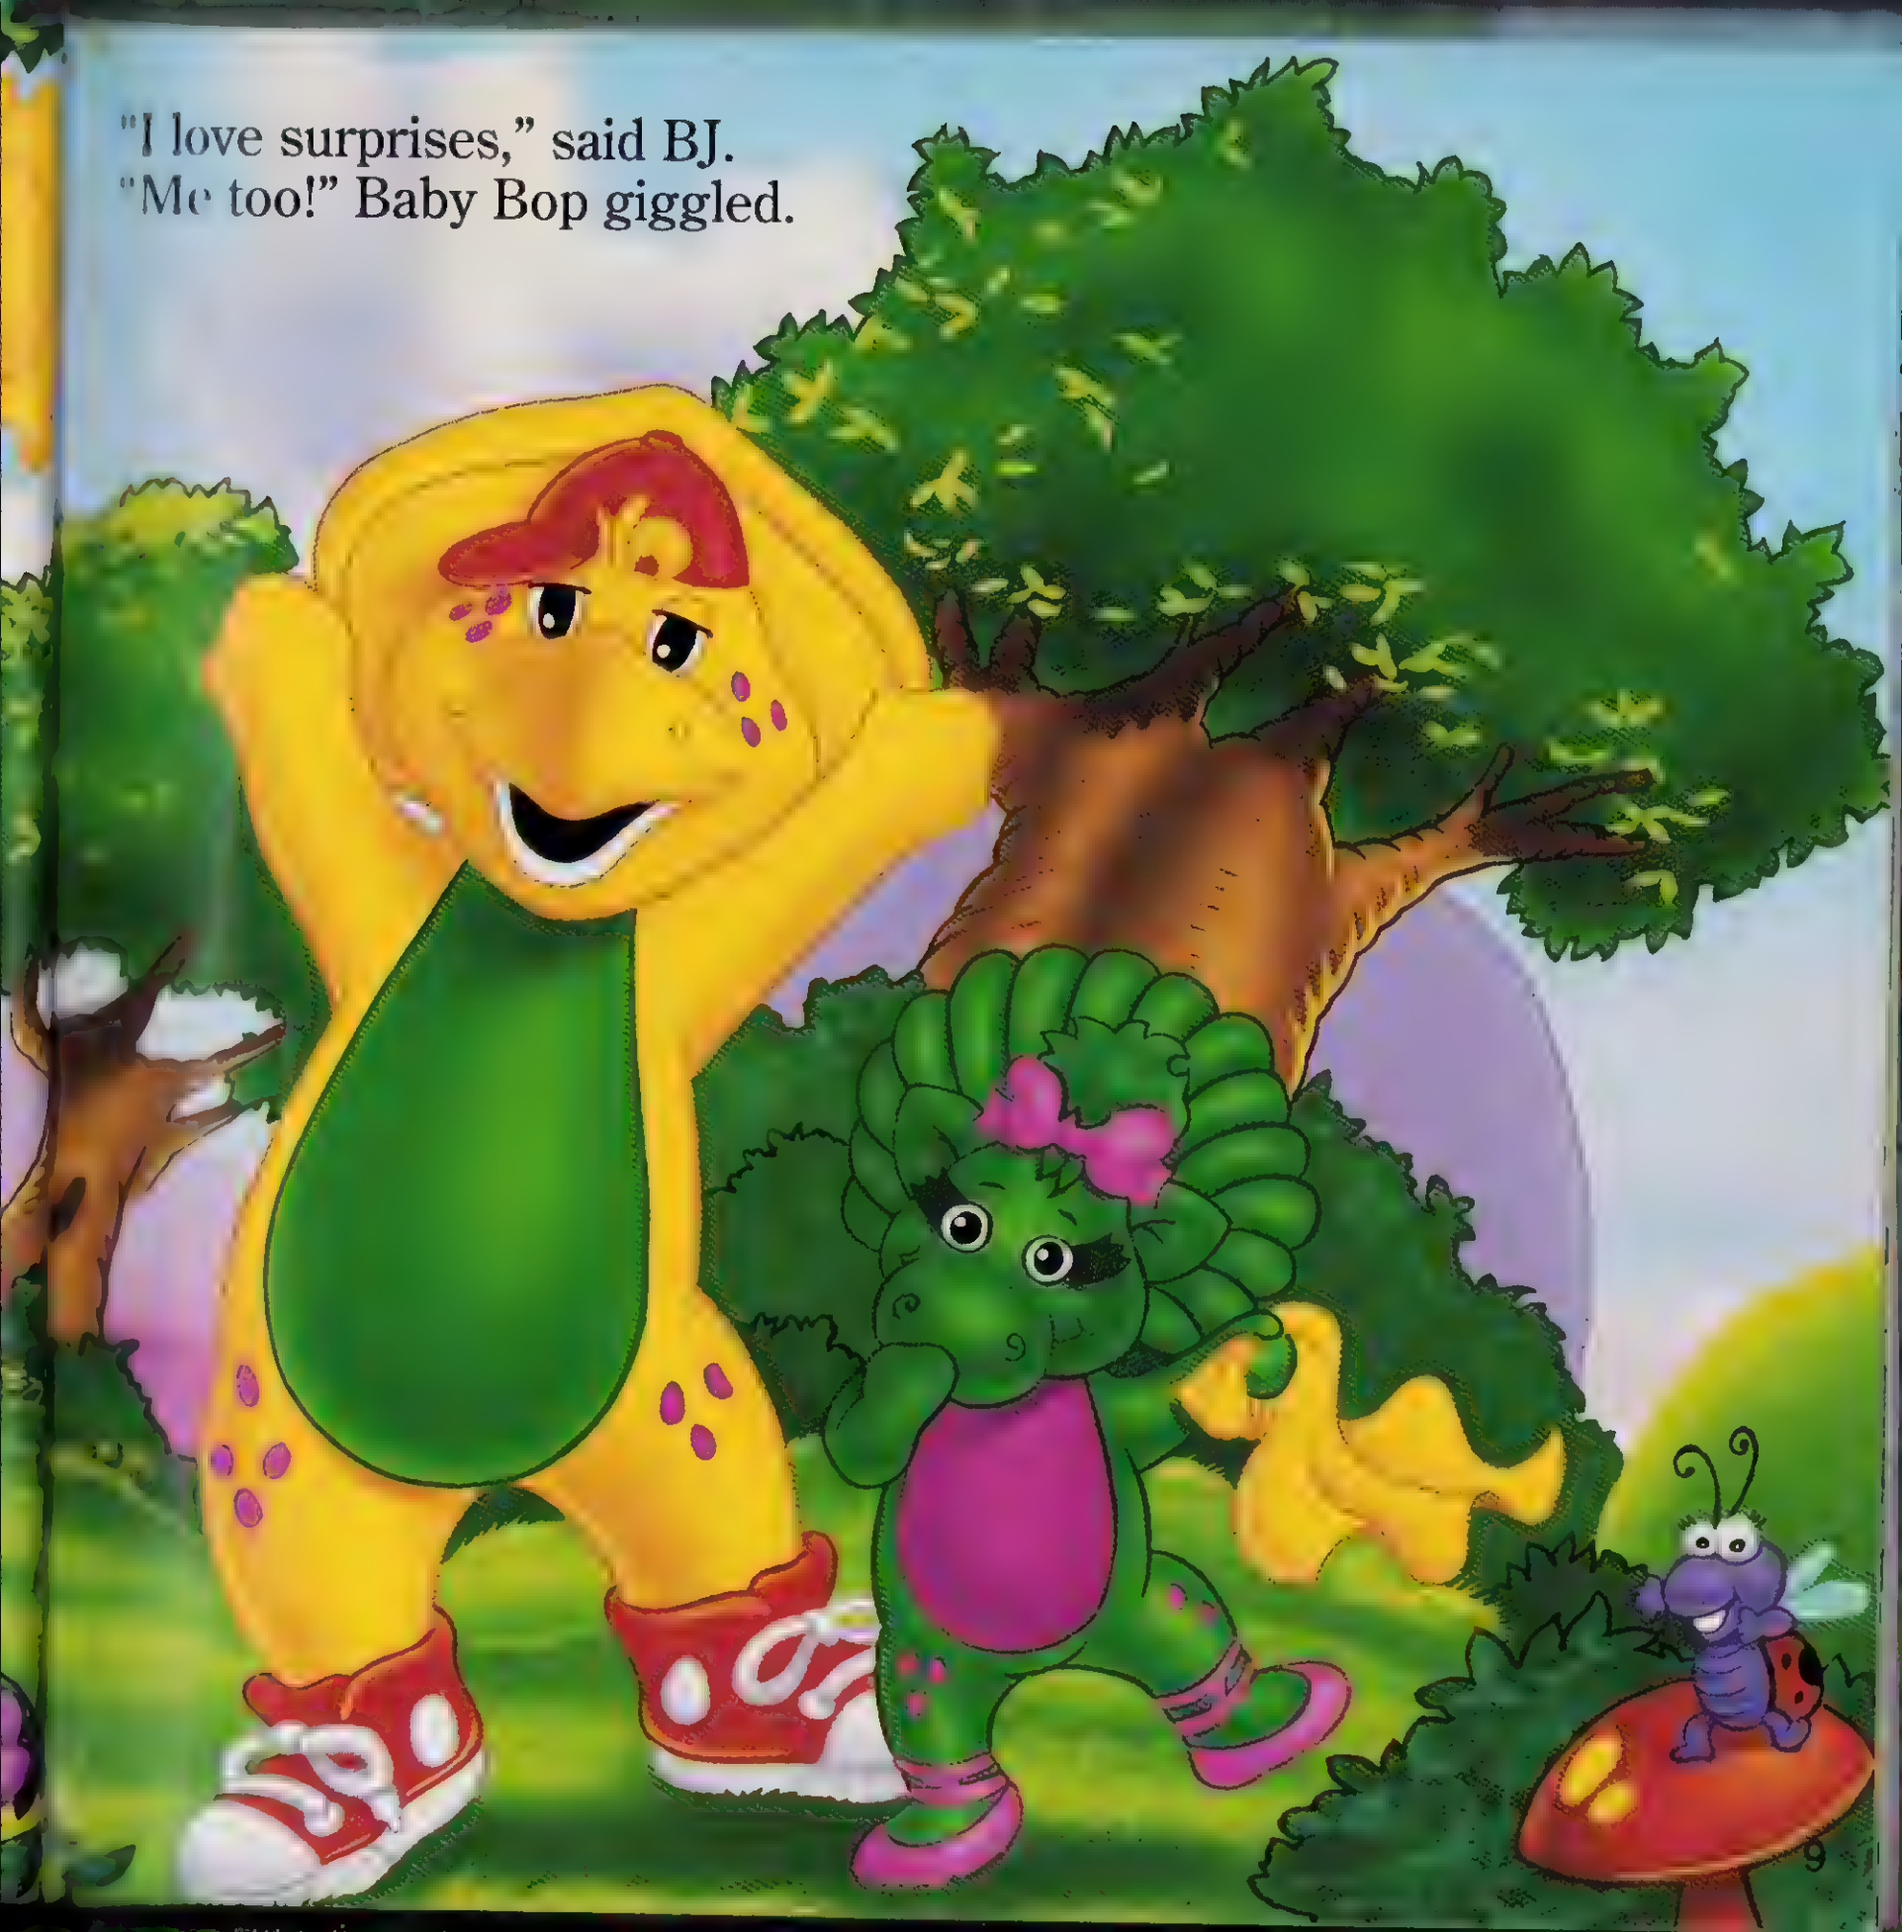
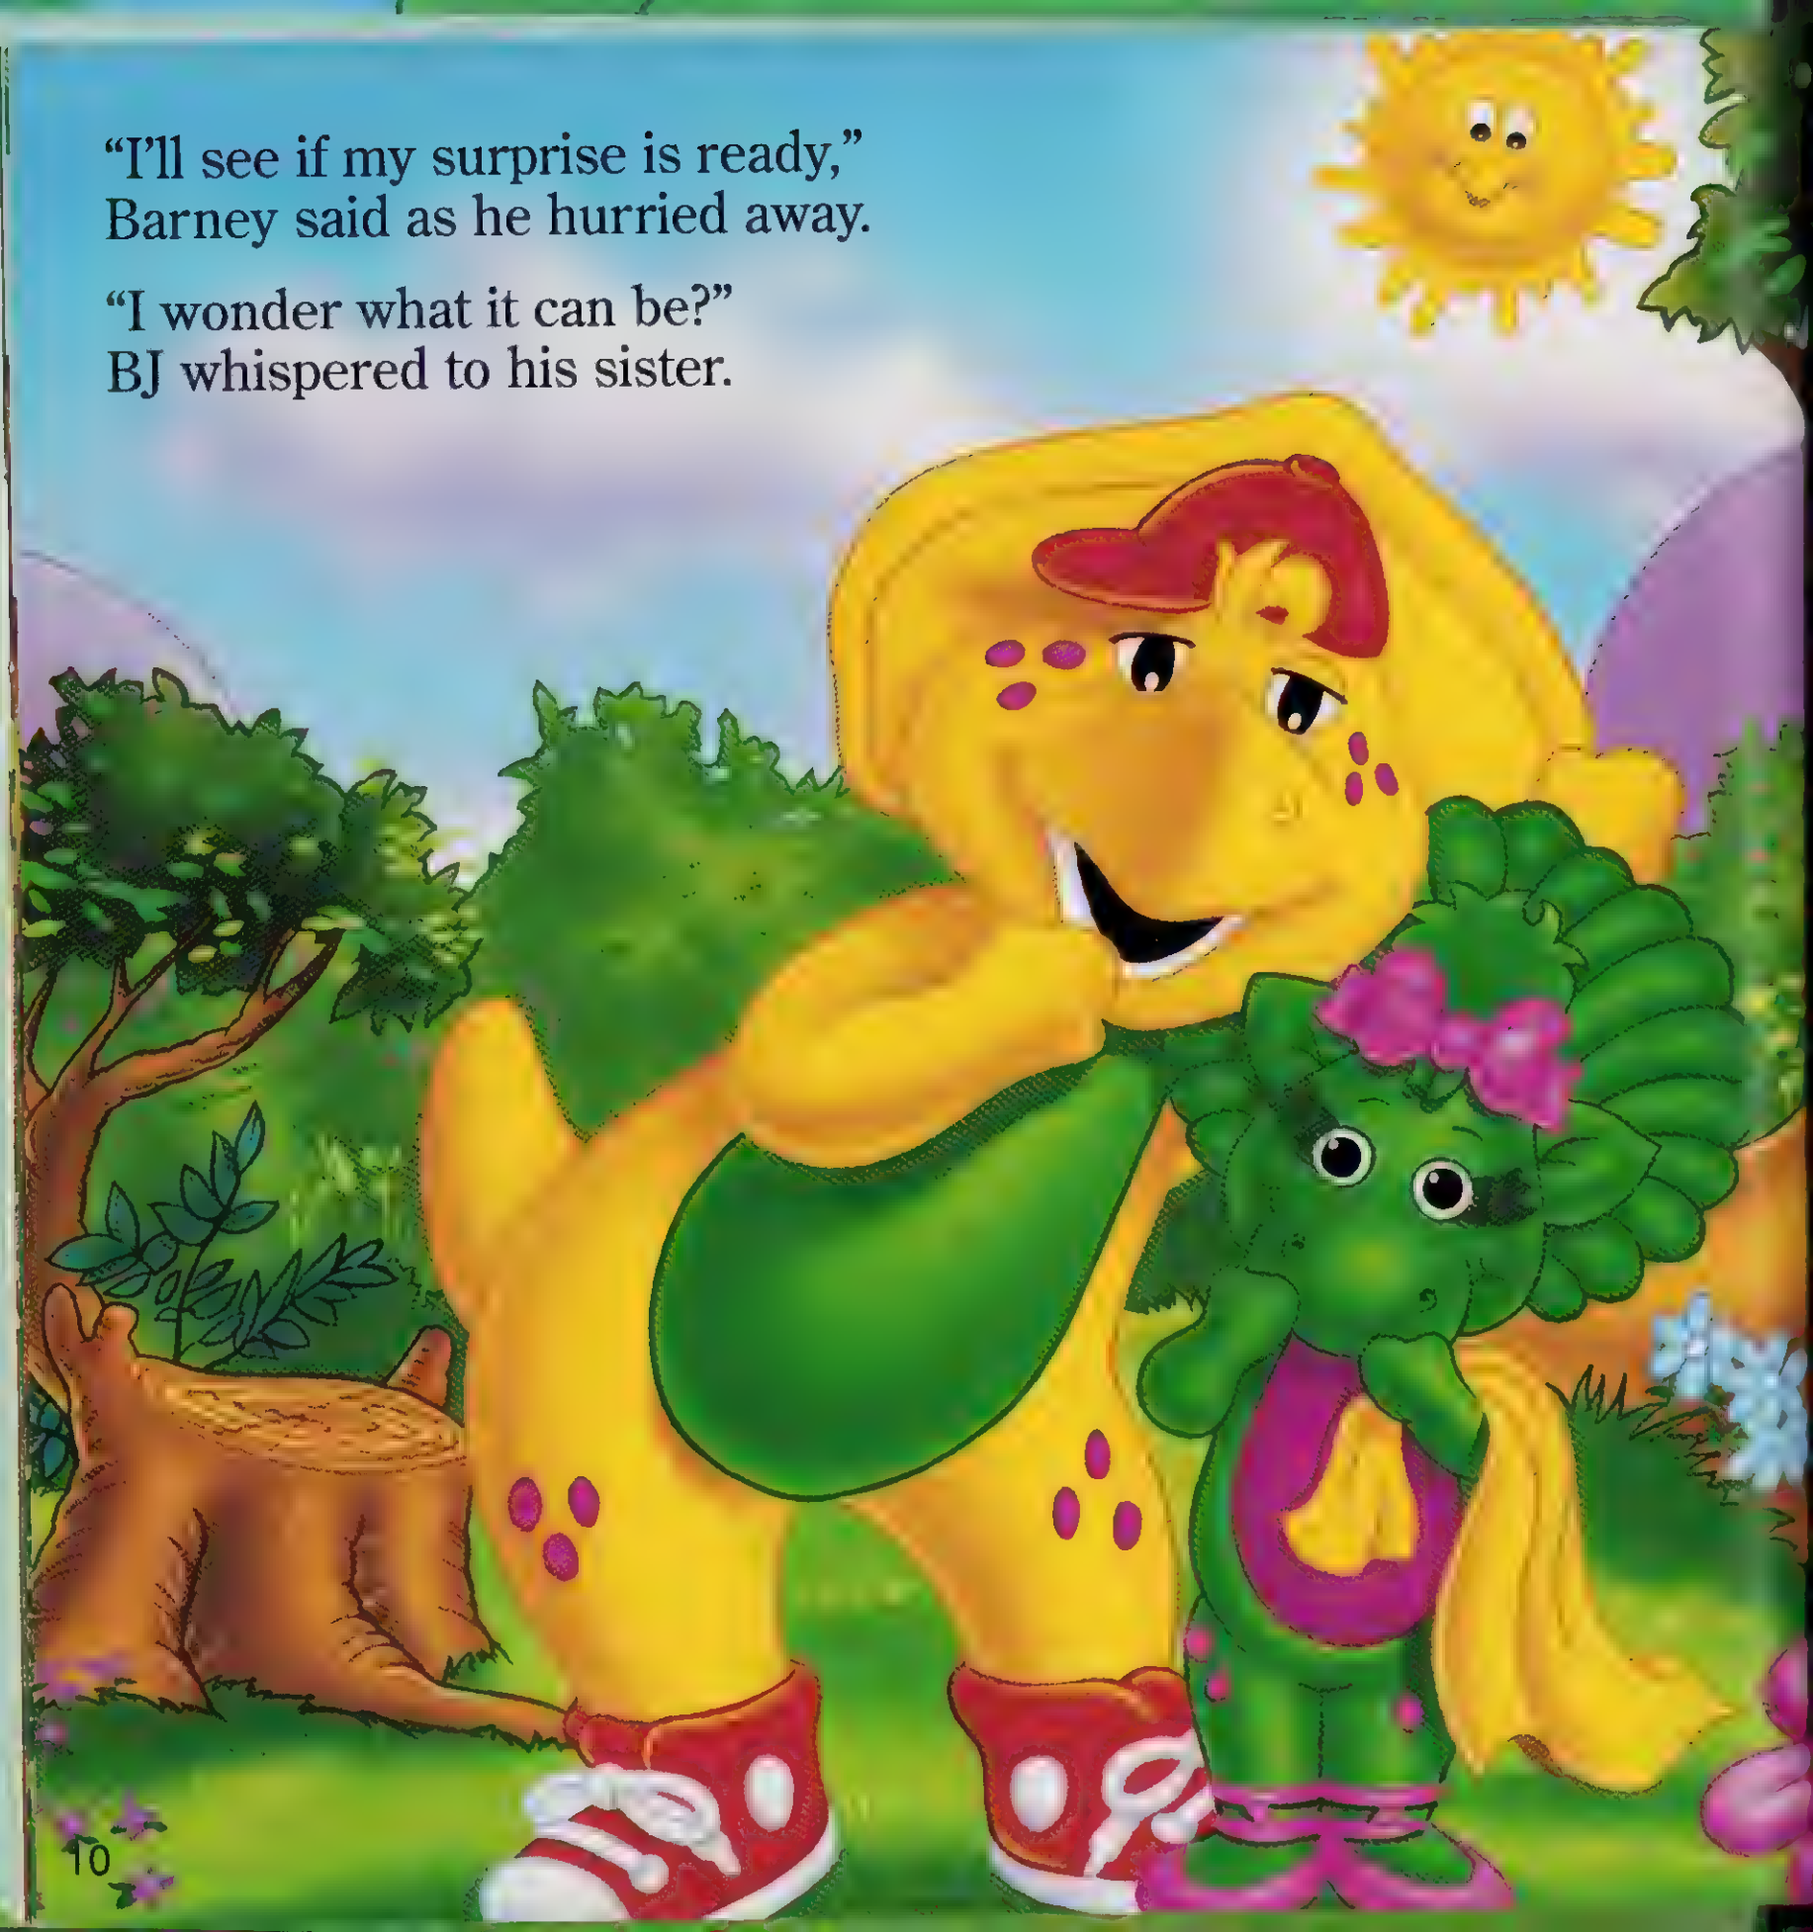
"Today is a special day,"
Barney said to BJ and Baby Bop.
"I have a fun surprise for you!"



"I love surprises," said BJ.
"Me too!" Baby Bop giggled.



"I'll see if my surprise is ready,"
Barney said as he hurried away.

"I wonder what it can be?"
BJ whispered to his sister.

Suddenly there was a very loud noise that sounded like this:
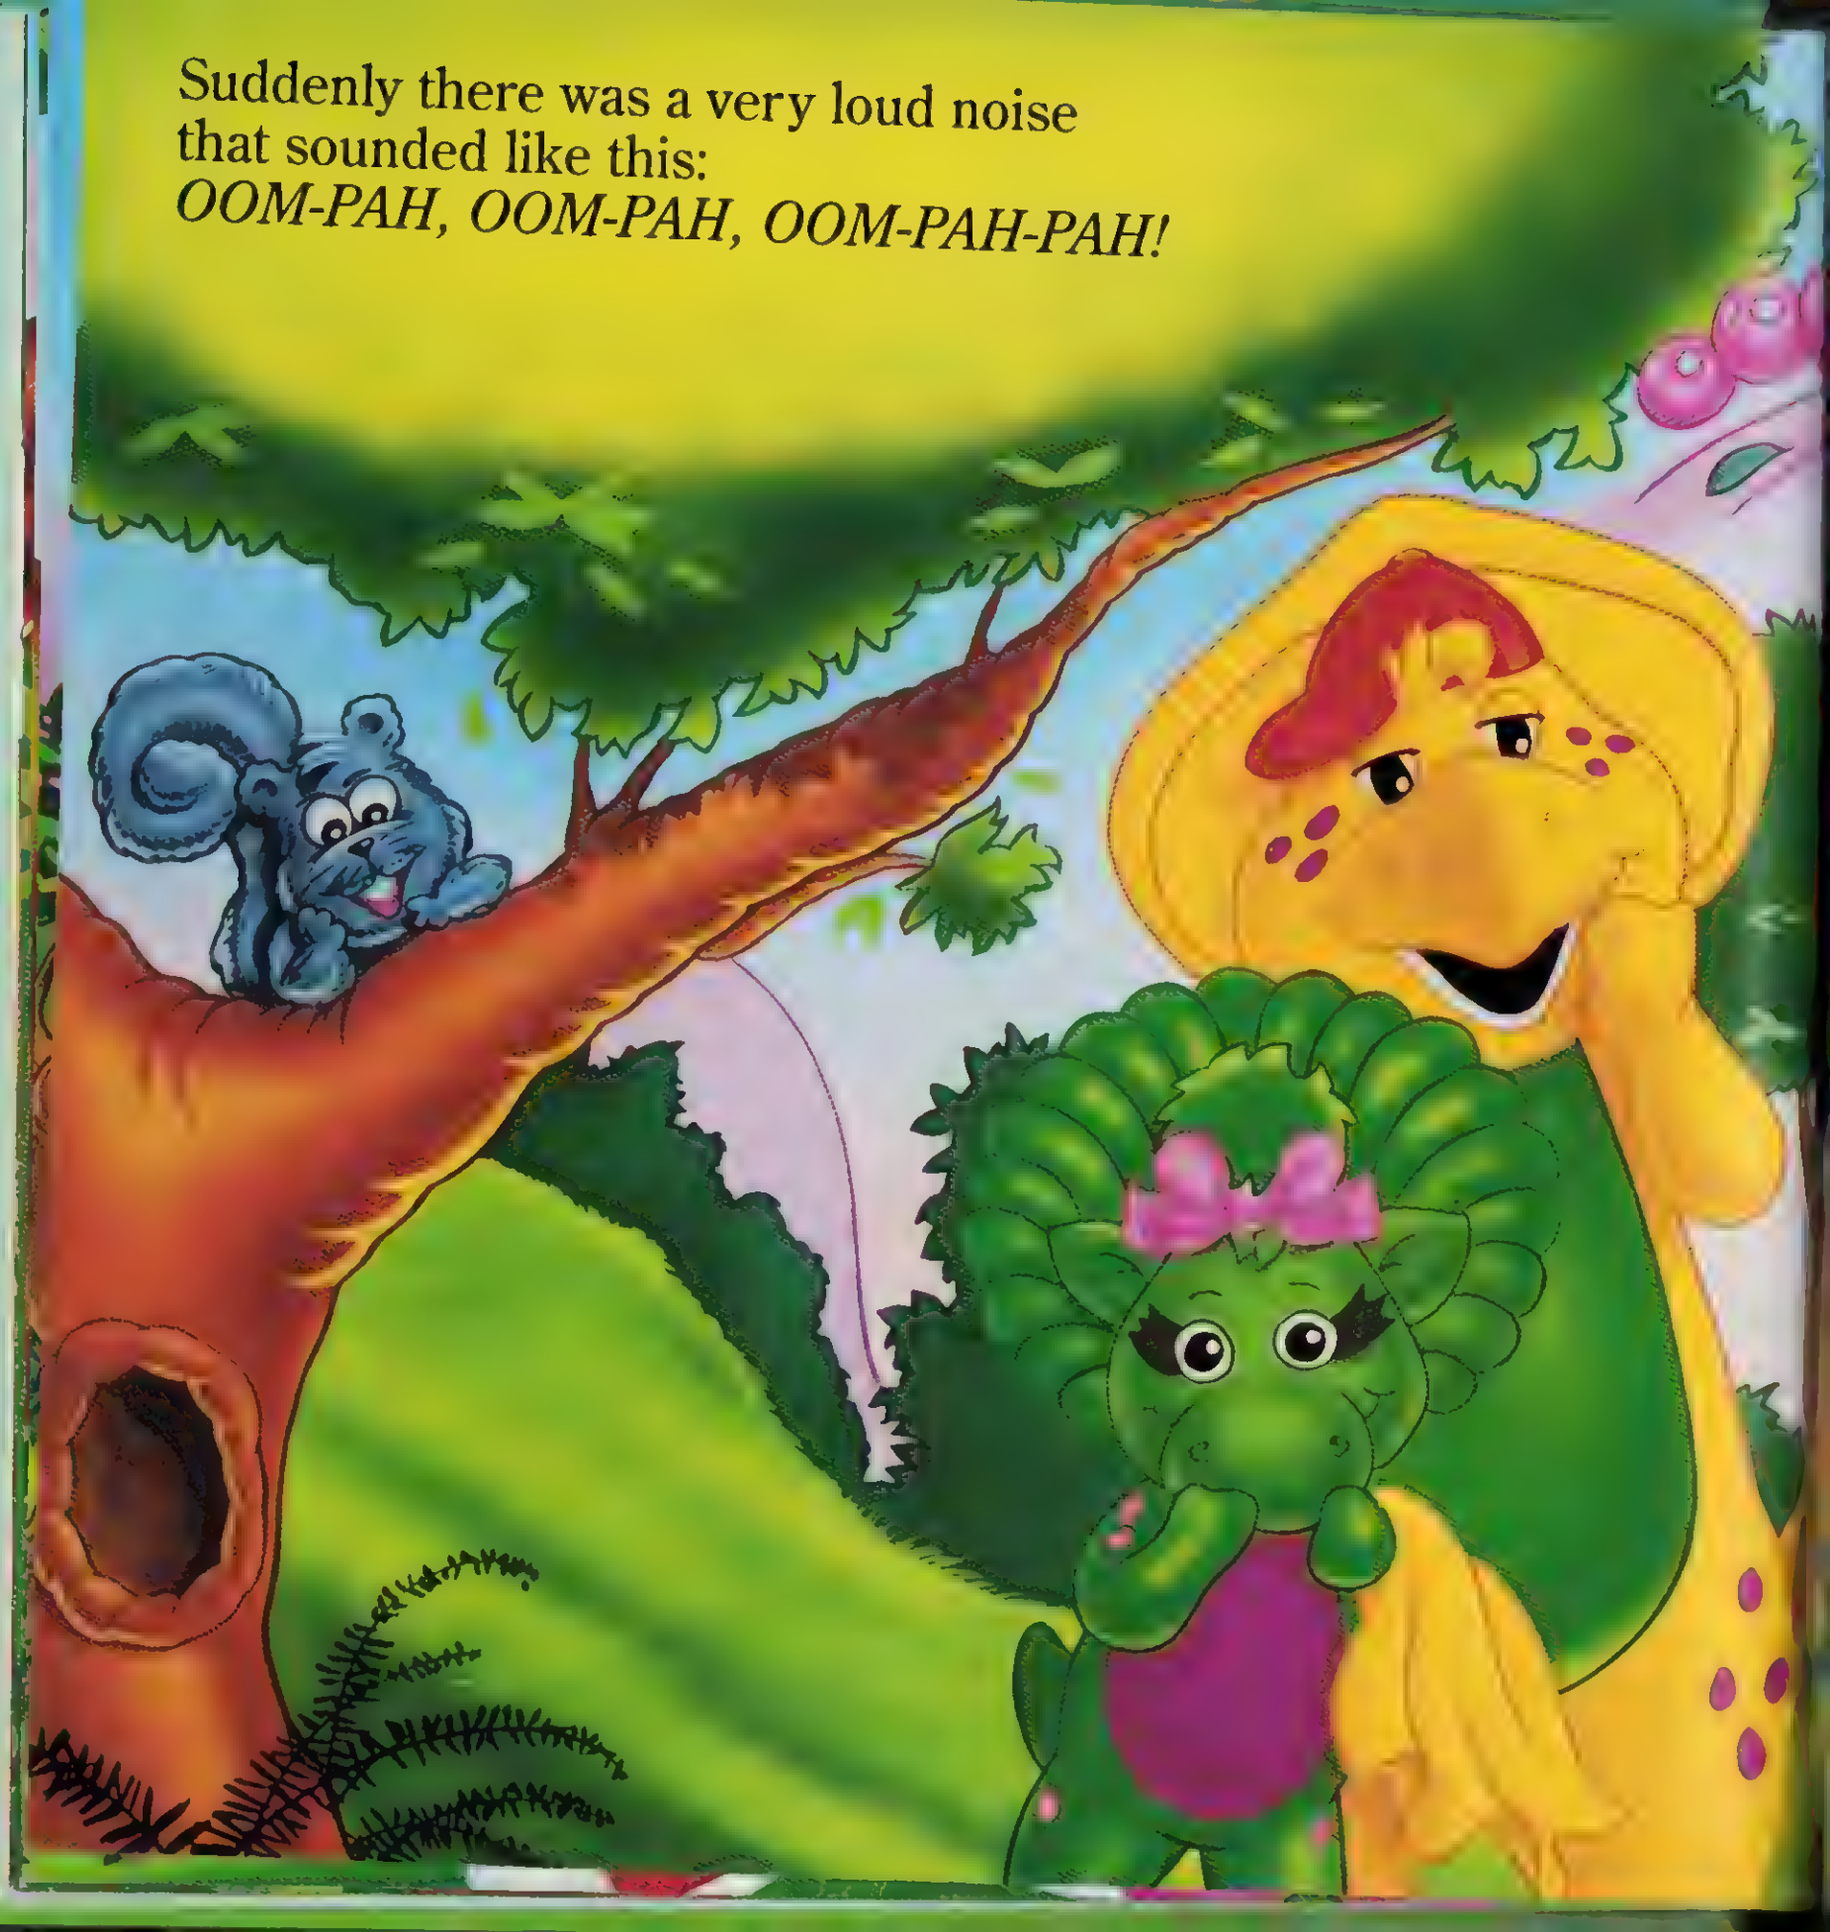
OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH-PAH!



"What was that?" asked Baby Bop.
"I don't know," said BJ, "but it sure has a very loud voice."

"Maybe it's an animal with a really big mouth," said BJ.
Baby Bop said, "What can it be?"

BJ and Baby Bop went looking for the animal with the very loud voice.

Here are some muddy footprints," said a helpful chipmunk.

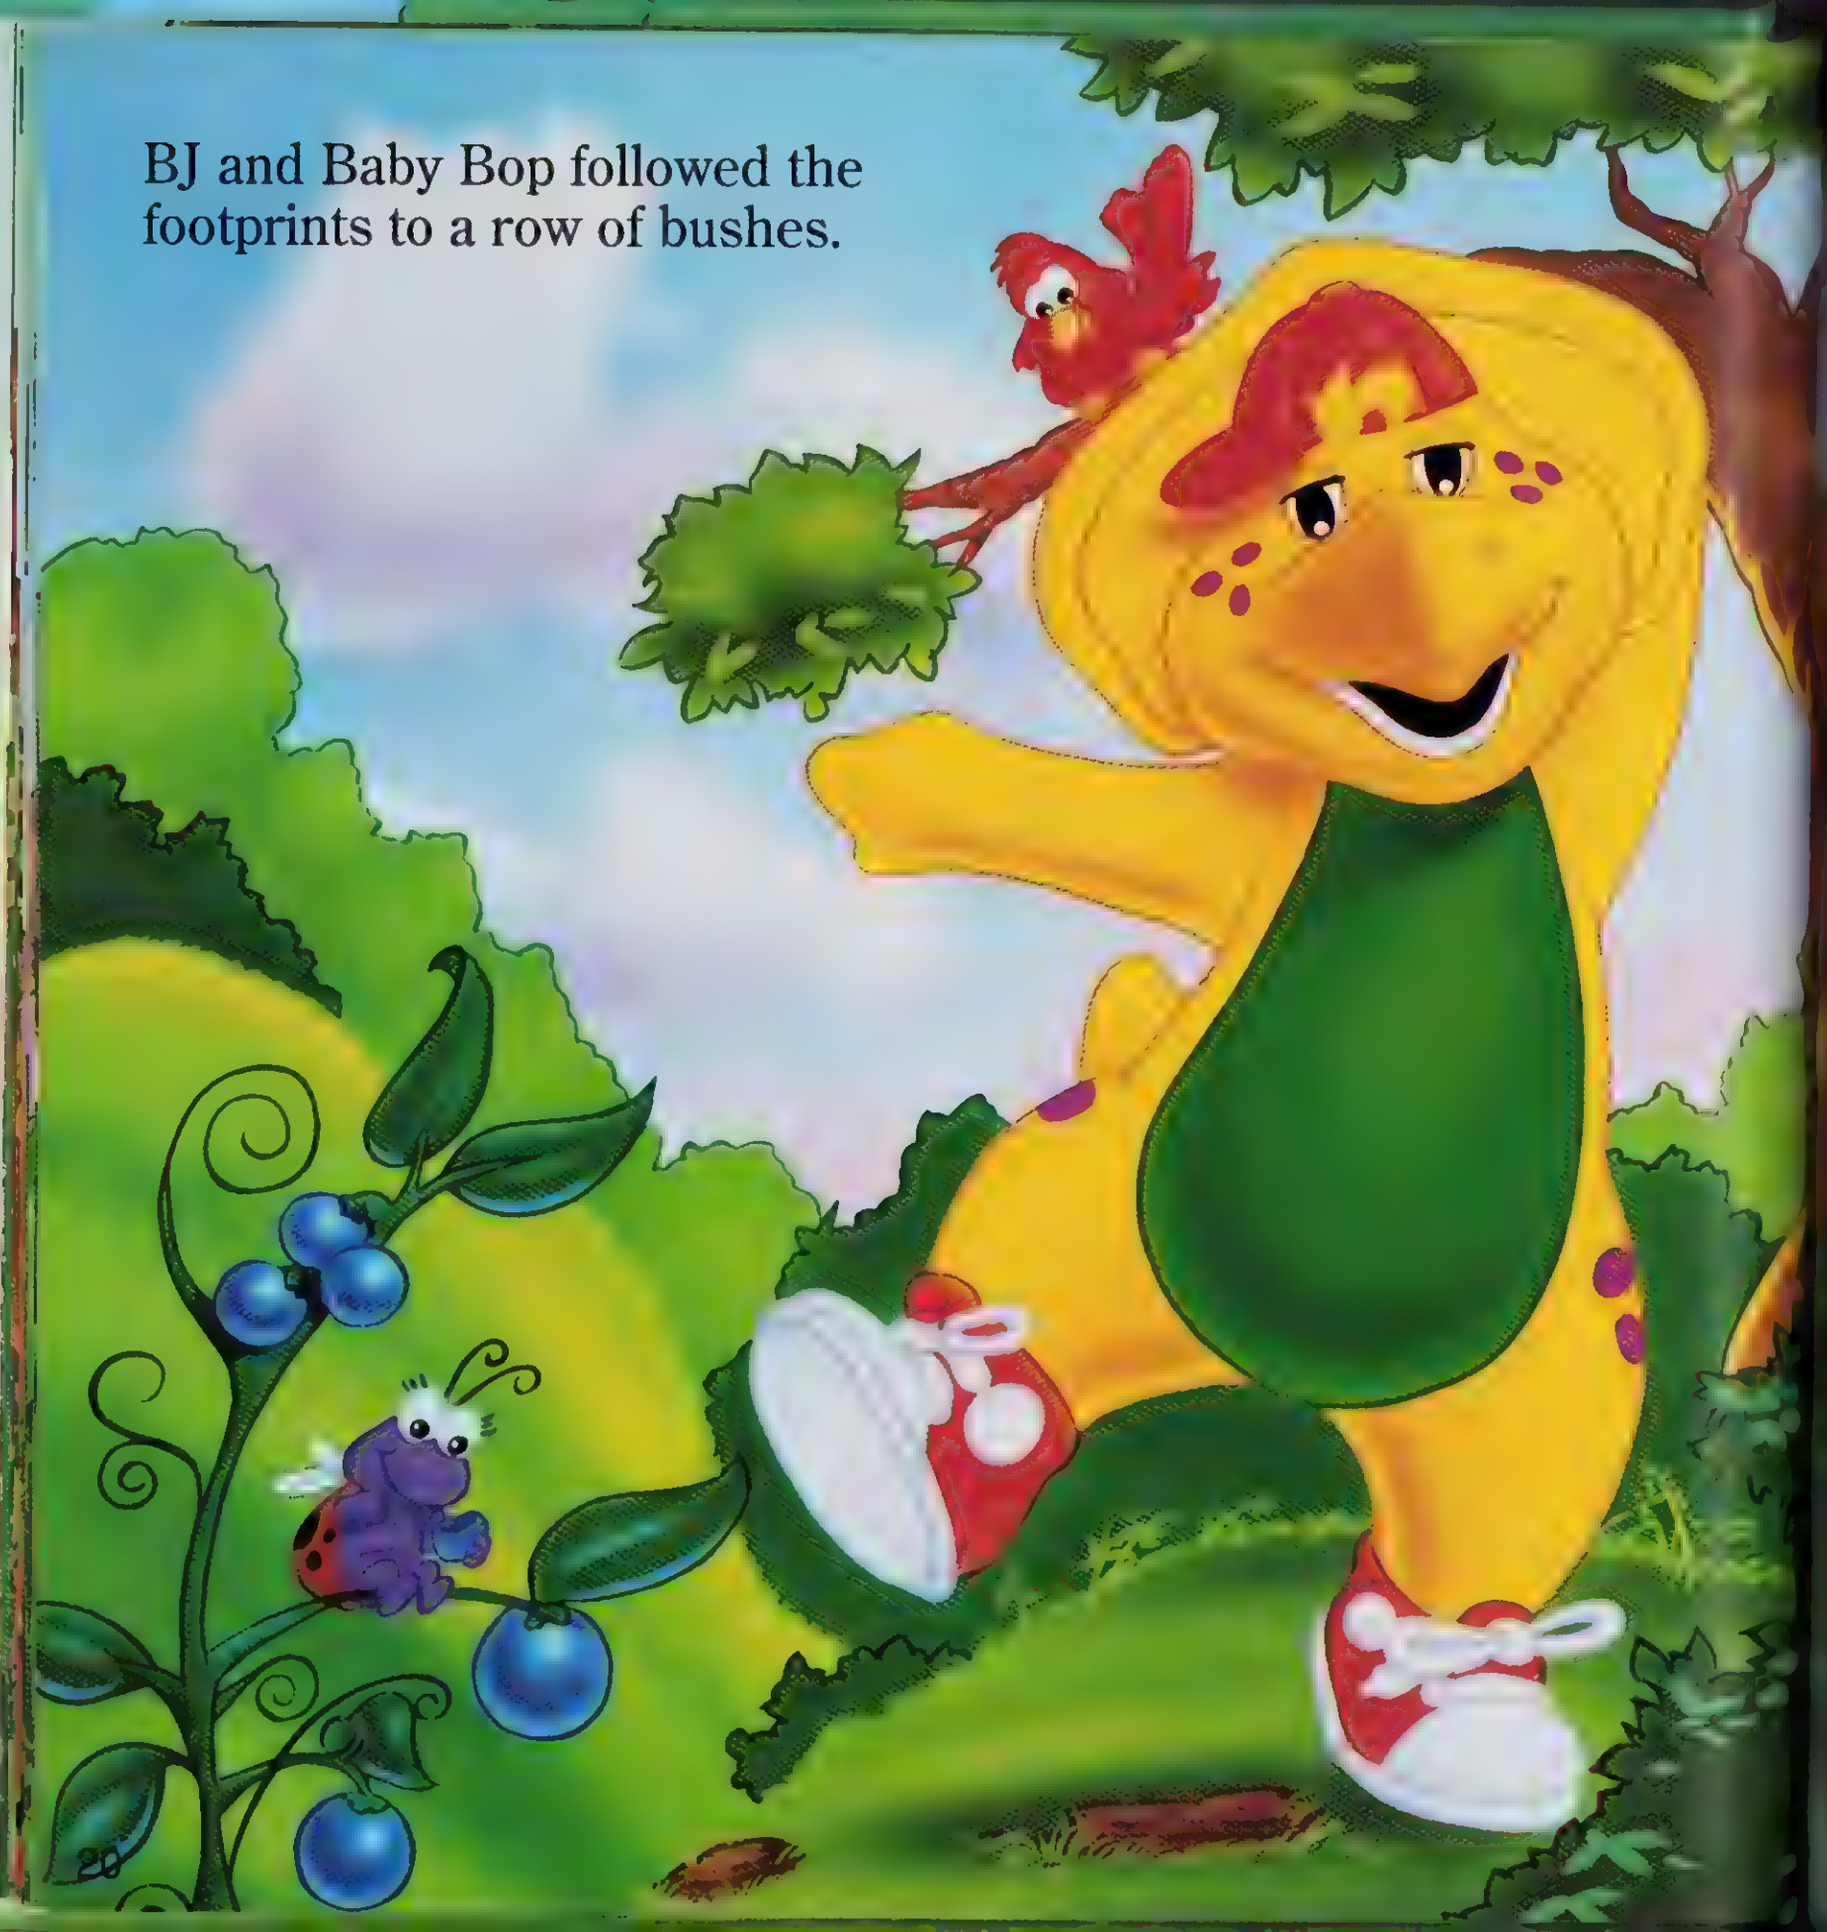
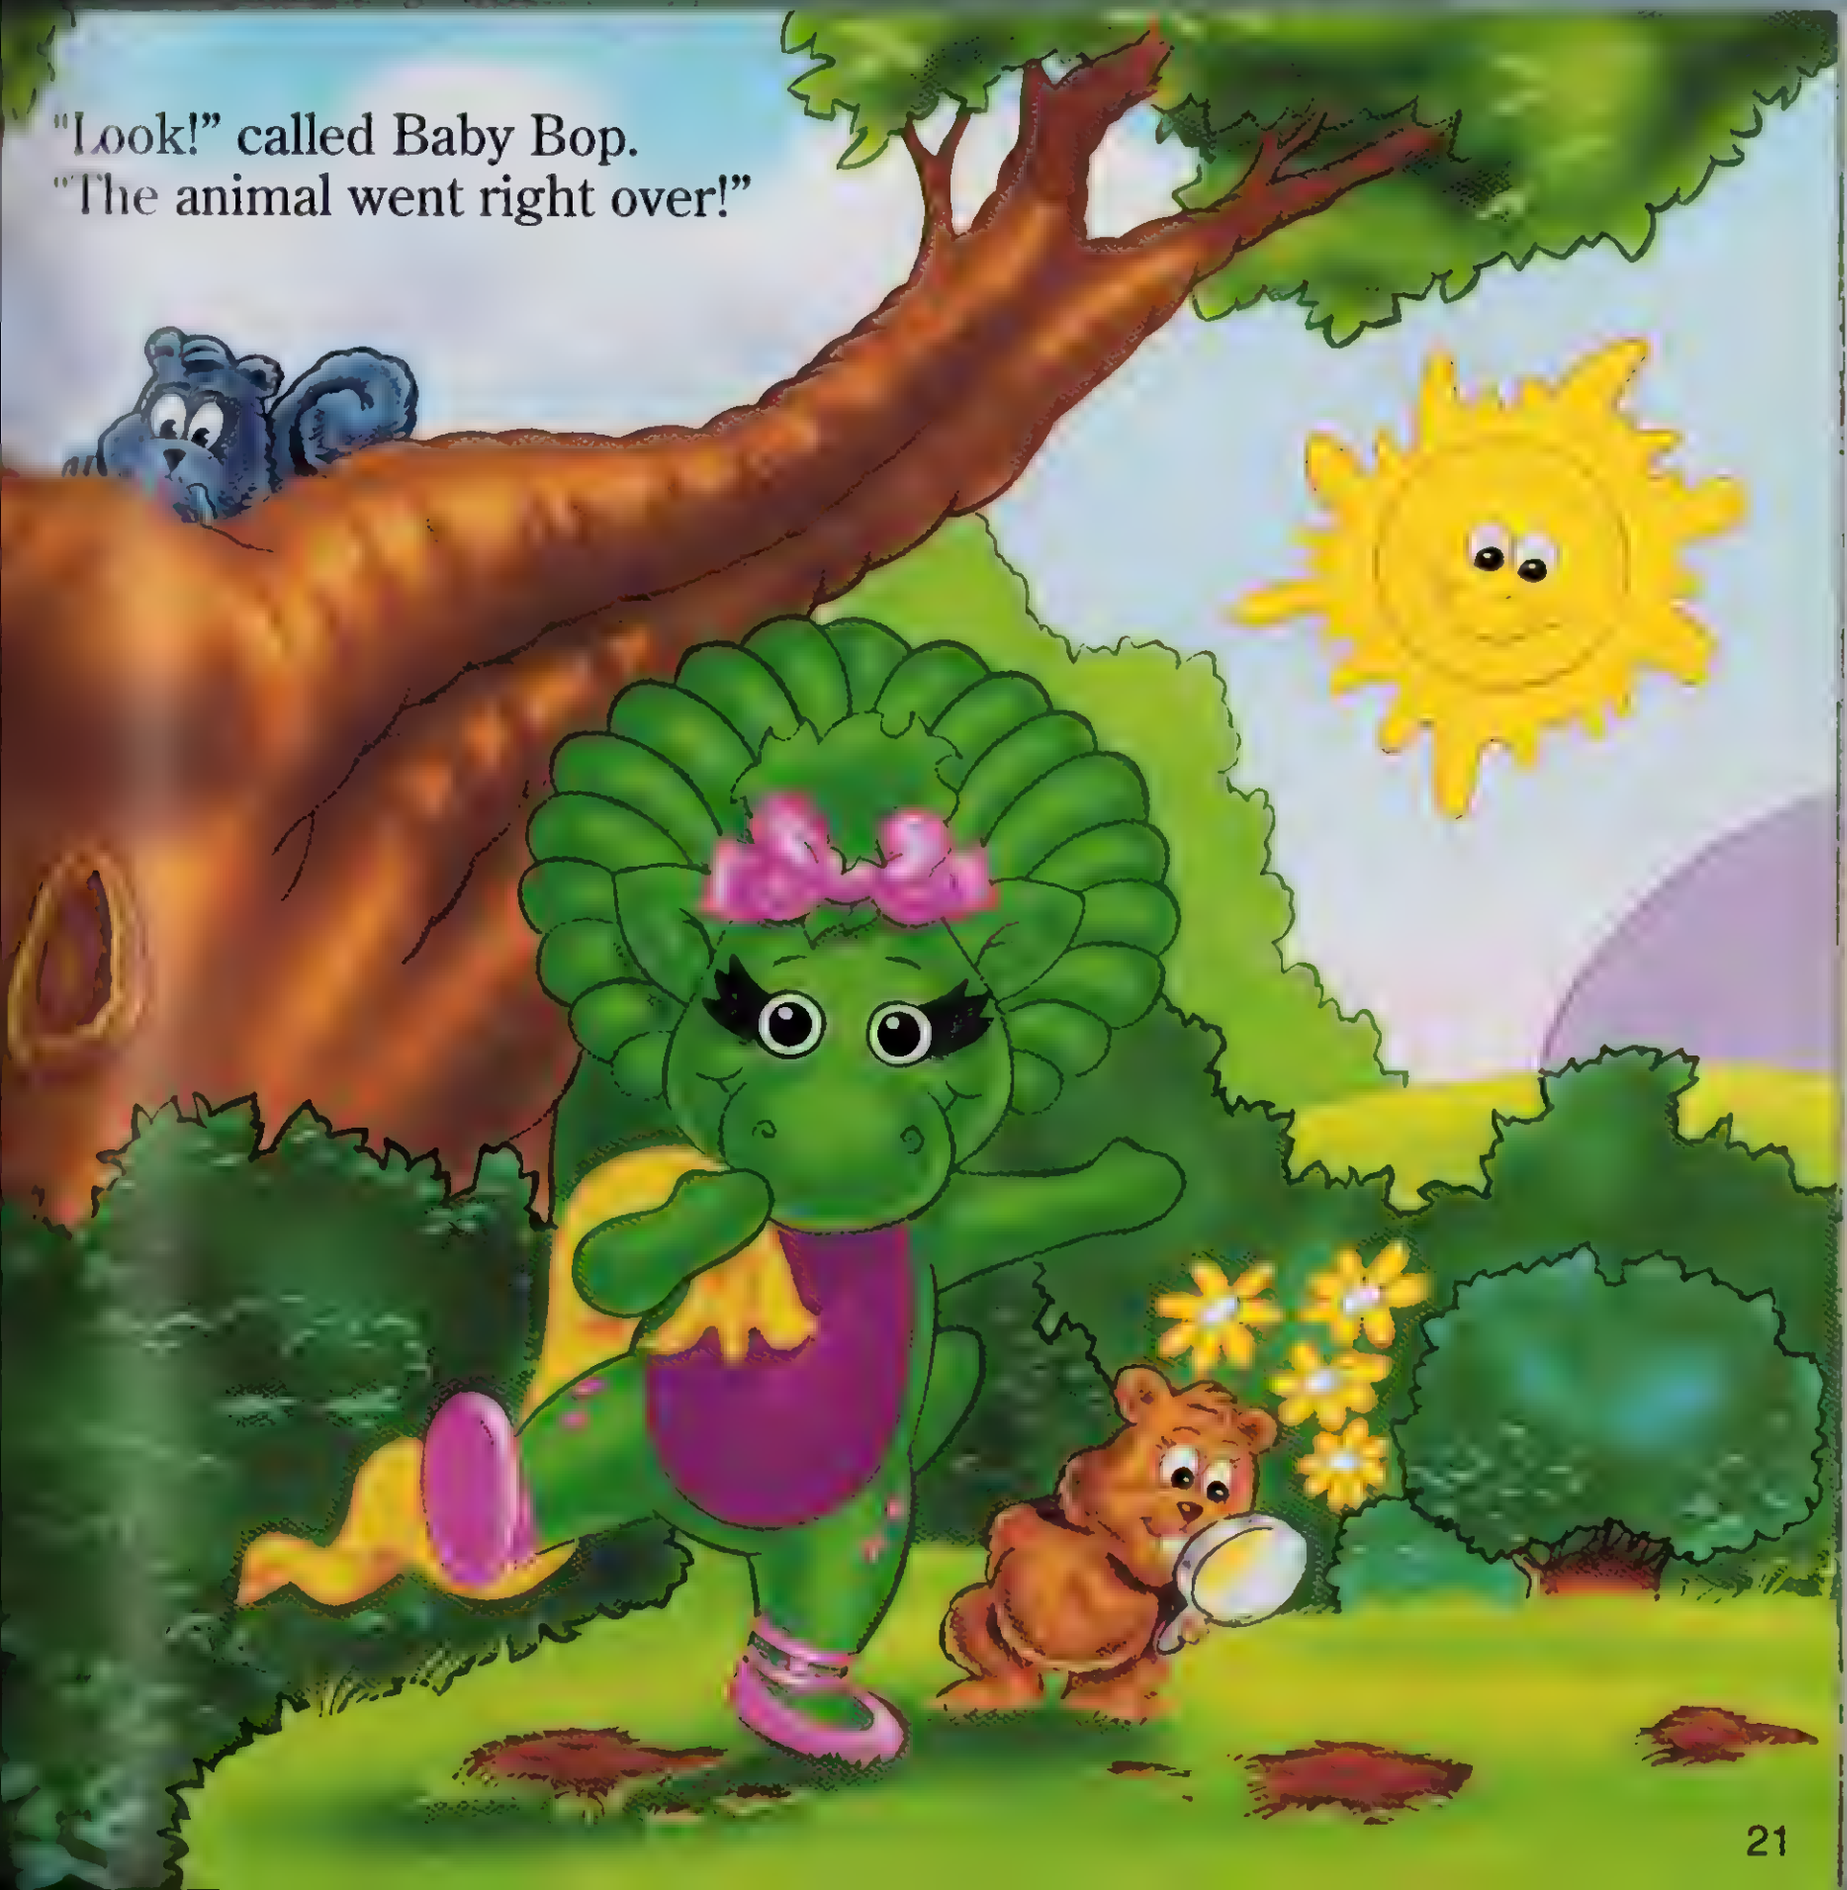
"This animal must have great big feet," said BJ. Baby Bop said, "What can it be?"

BJ and Baby Bop followed the footprints to a row of bushes.





"Look!" called Baby Bop.
"The animal went right over!"

"Maybe the animal has very long legs," BJ said.
Baby Bop said, "What can it be?"

Just then BJ and Baby Bop heard the sound again.
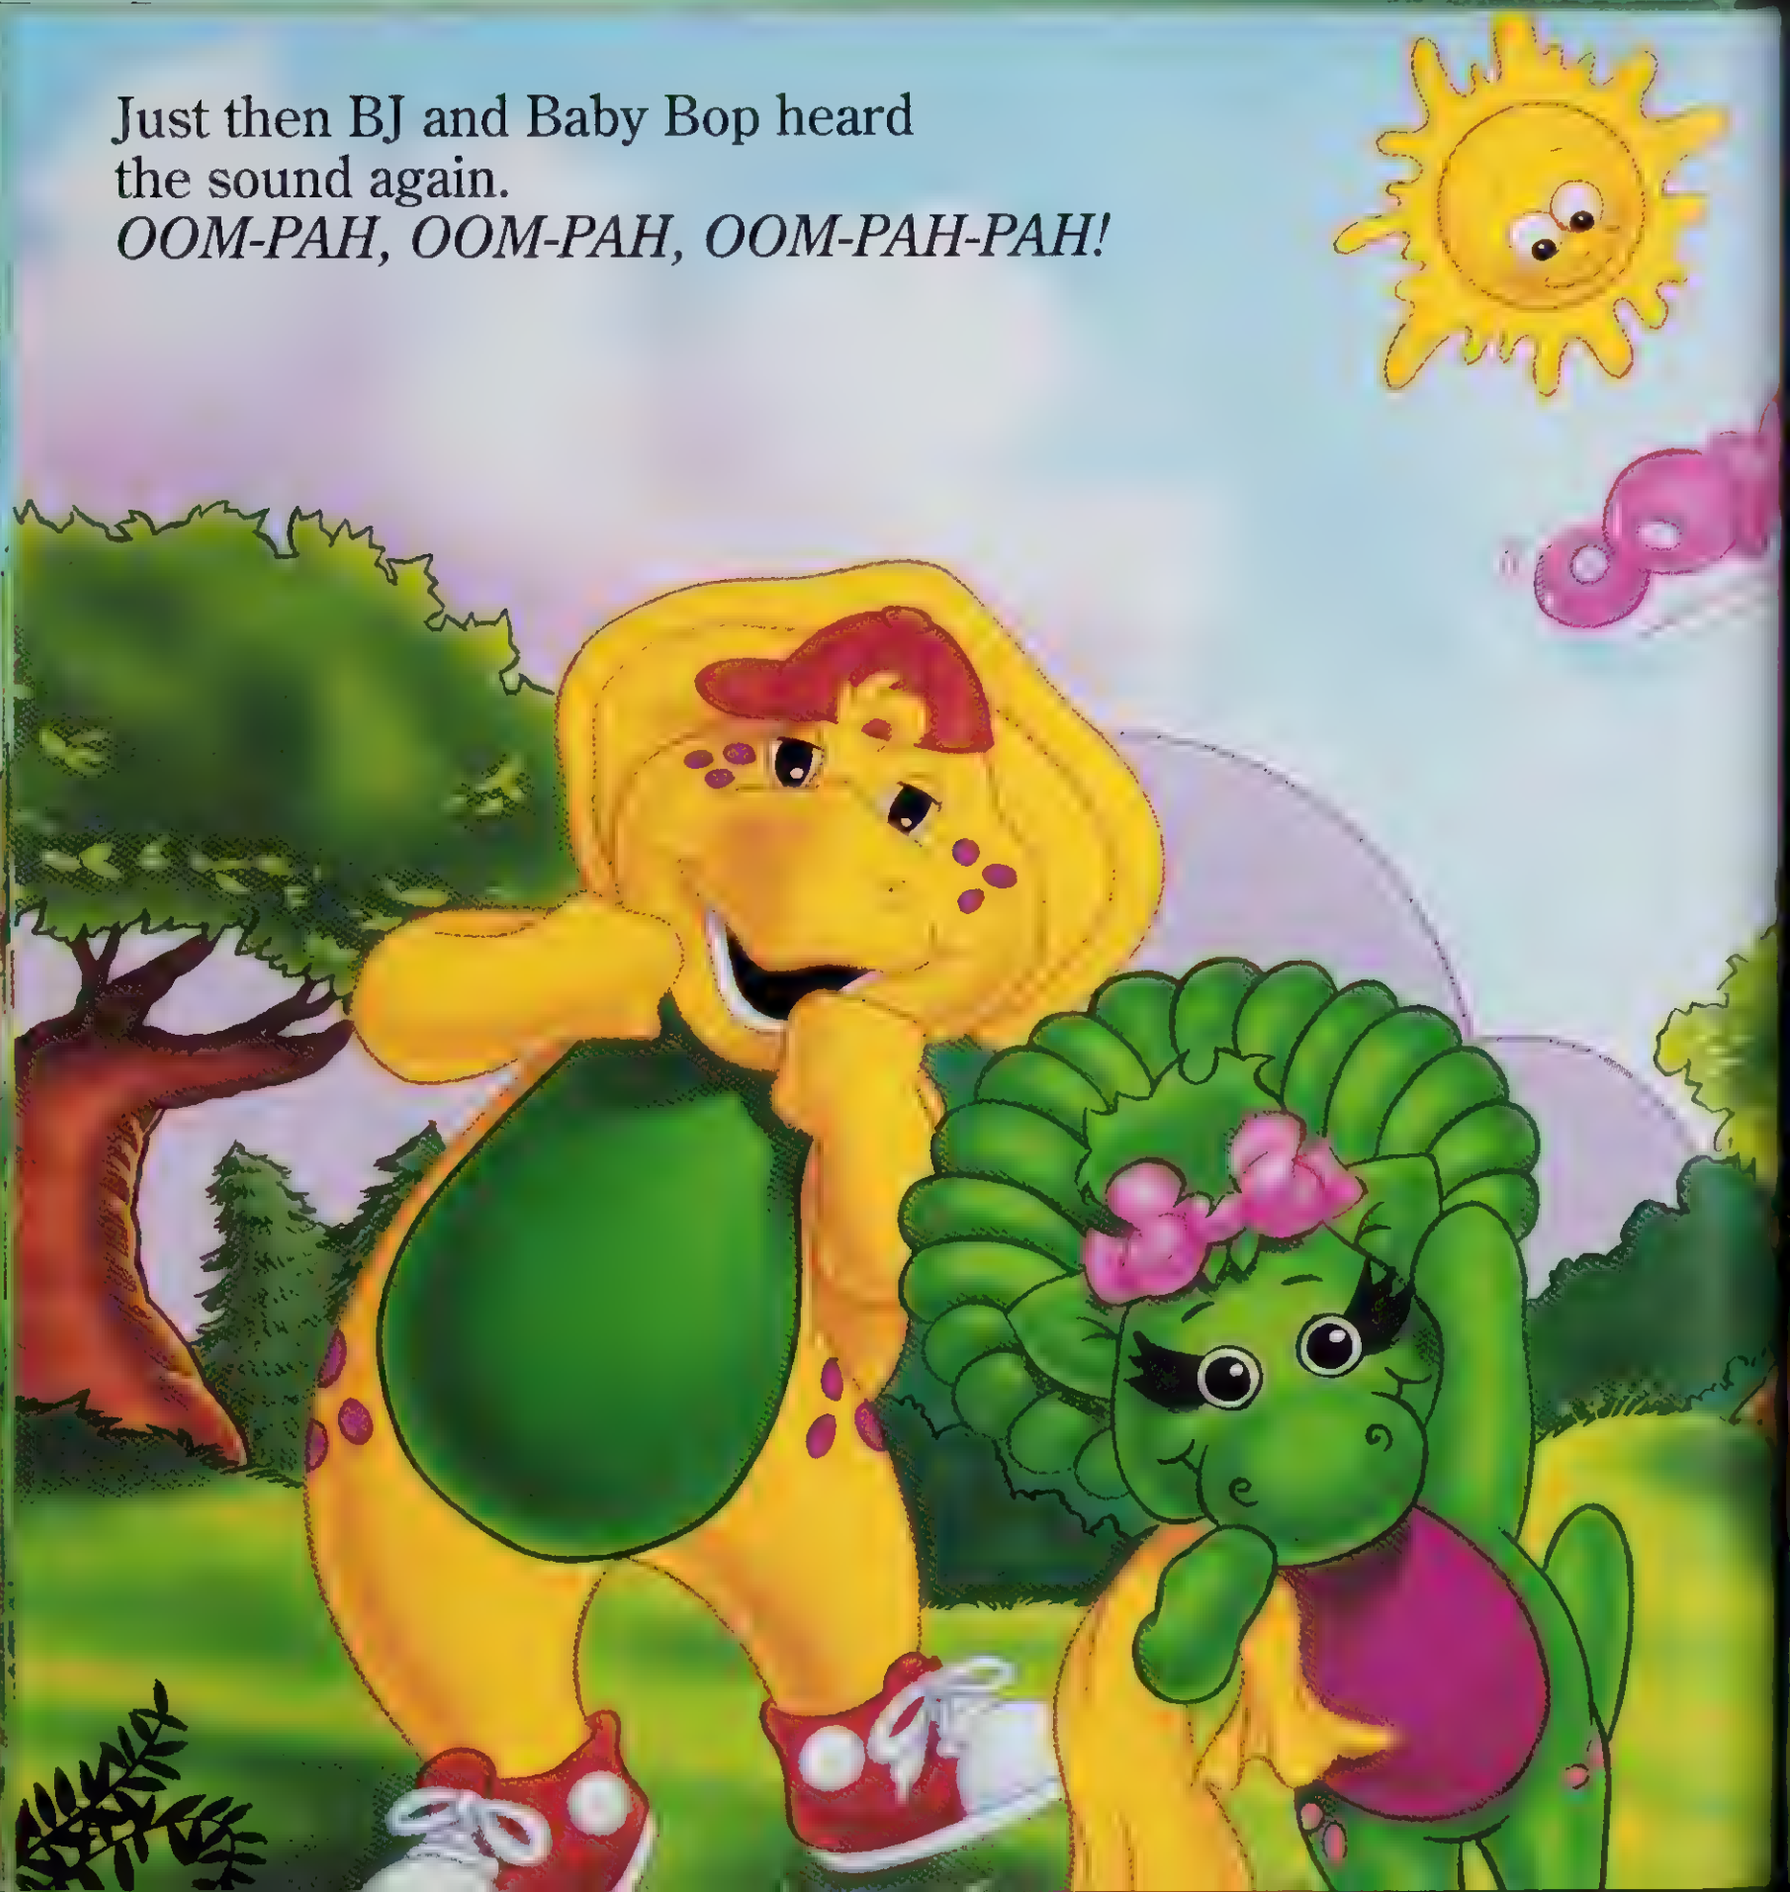
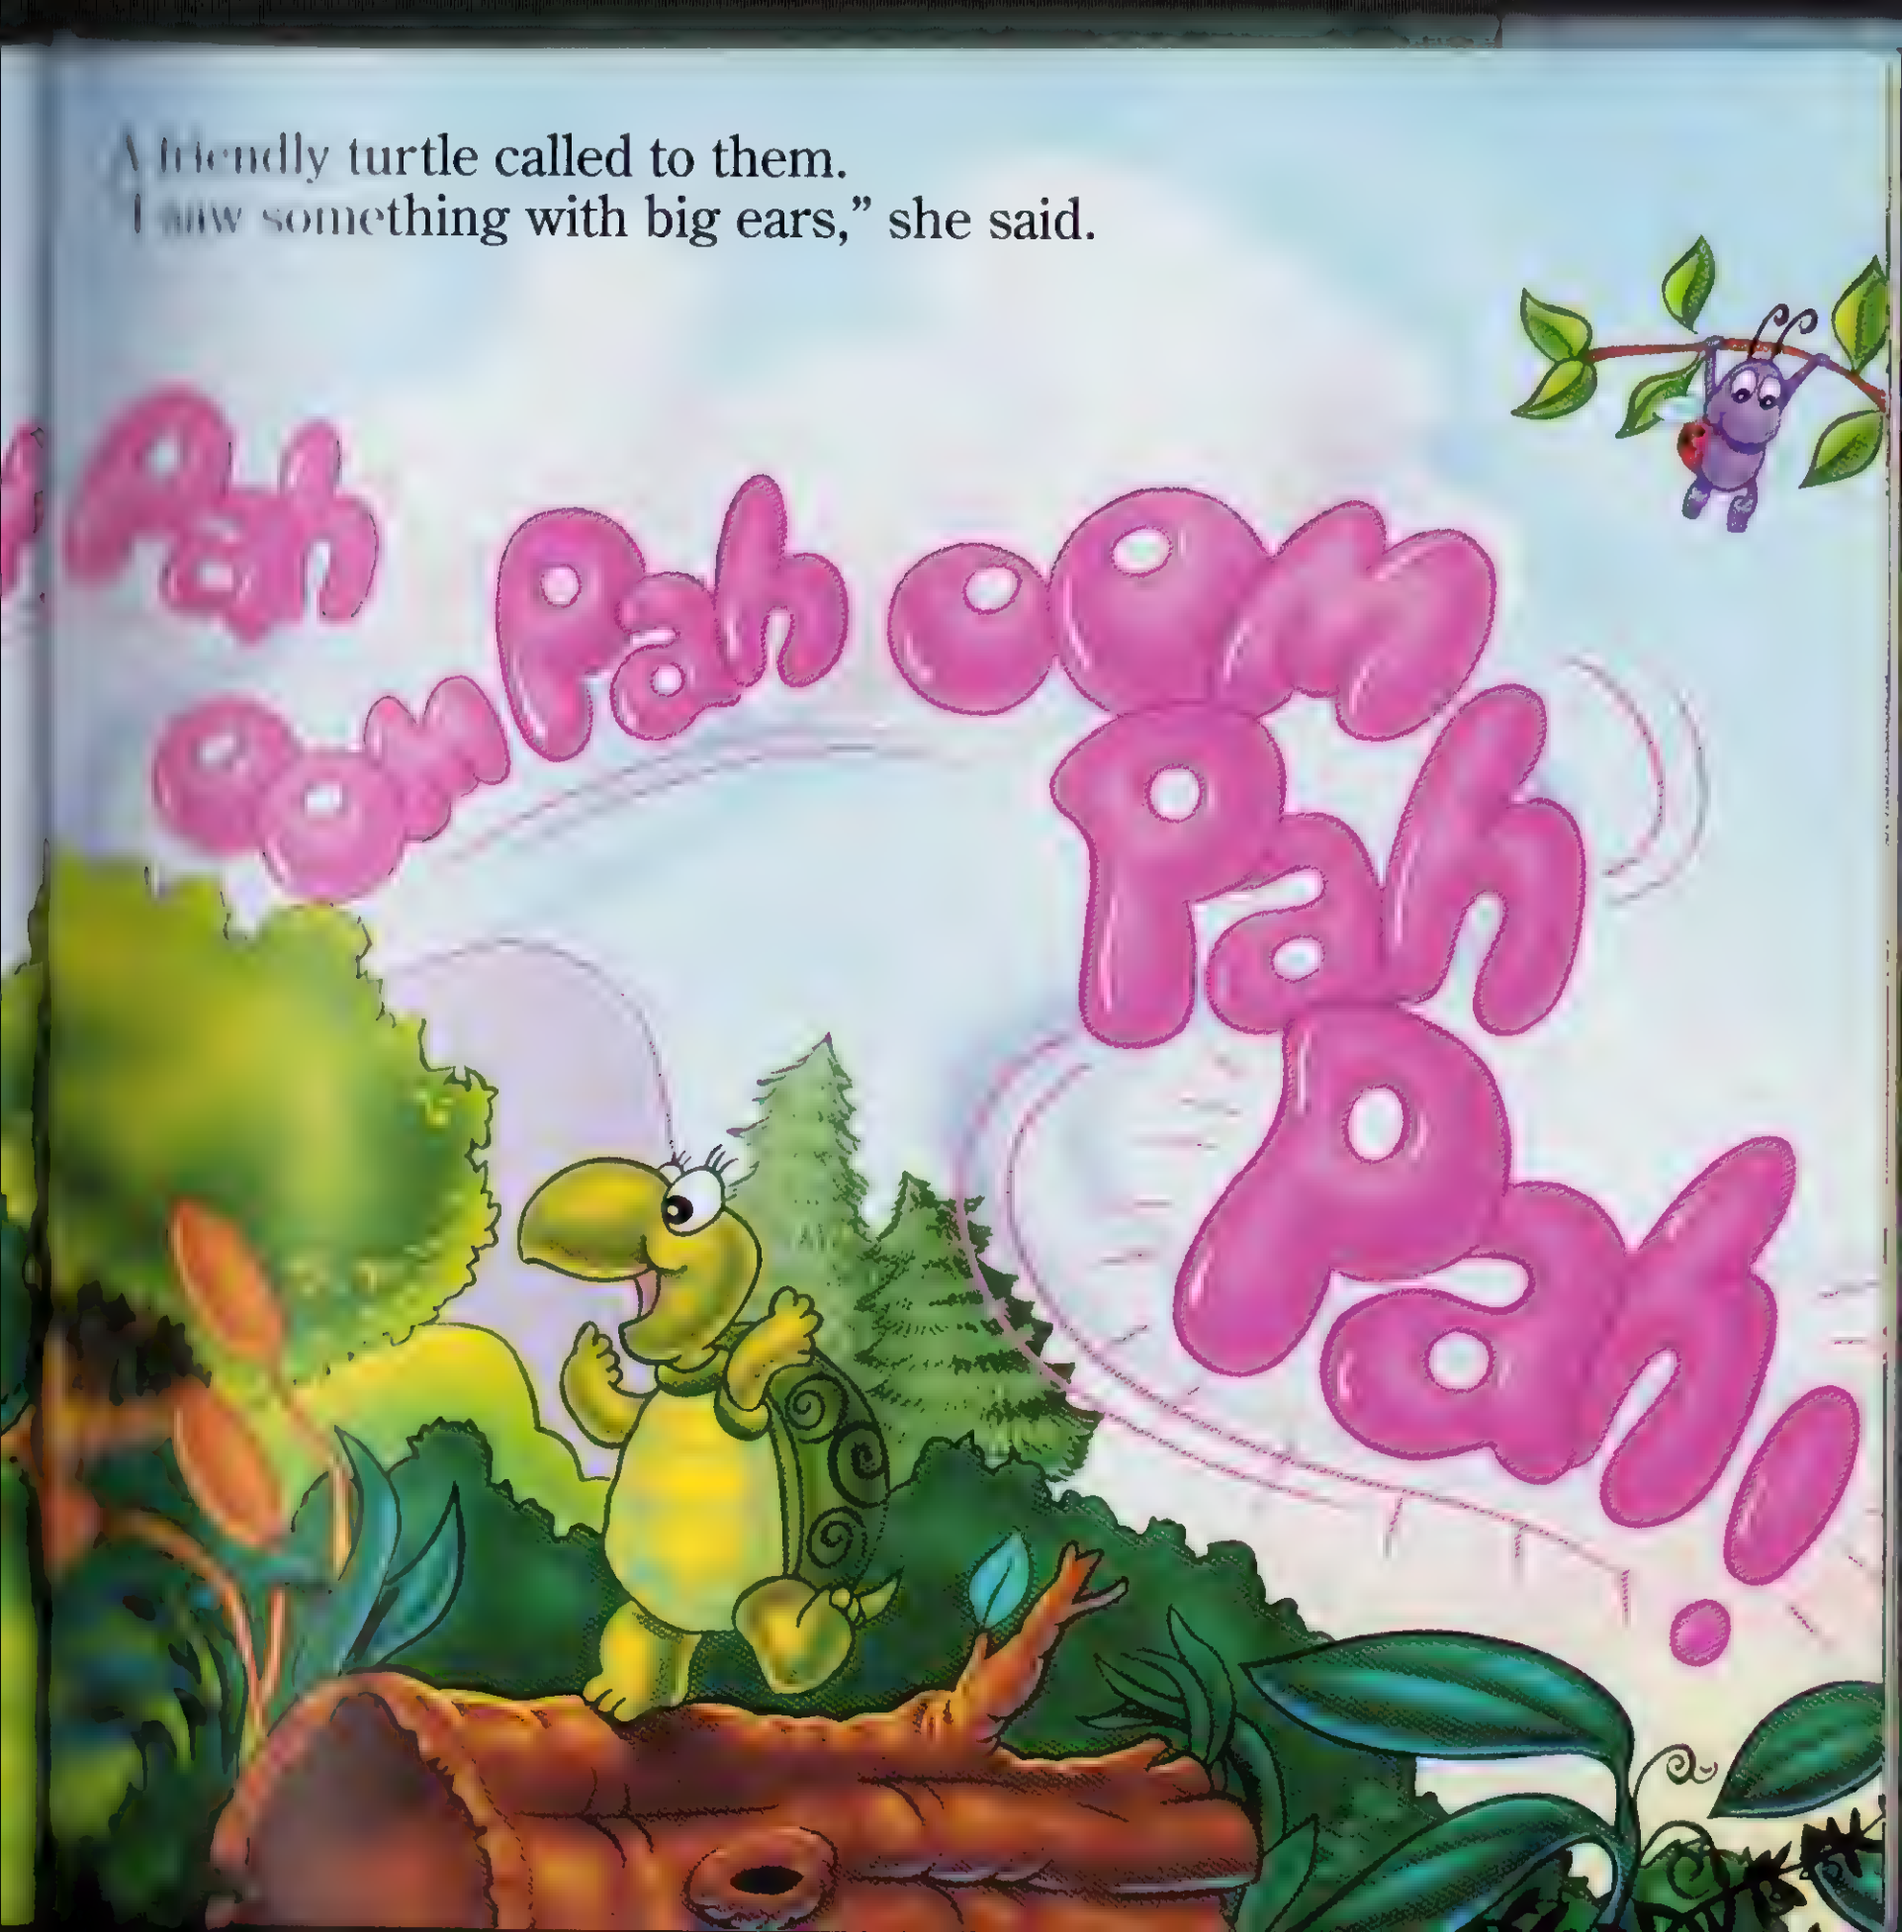
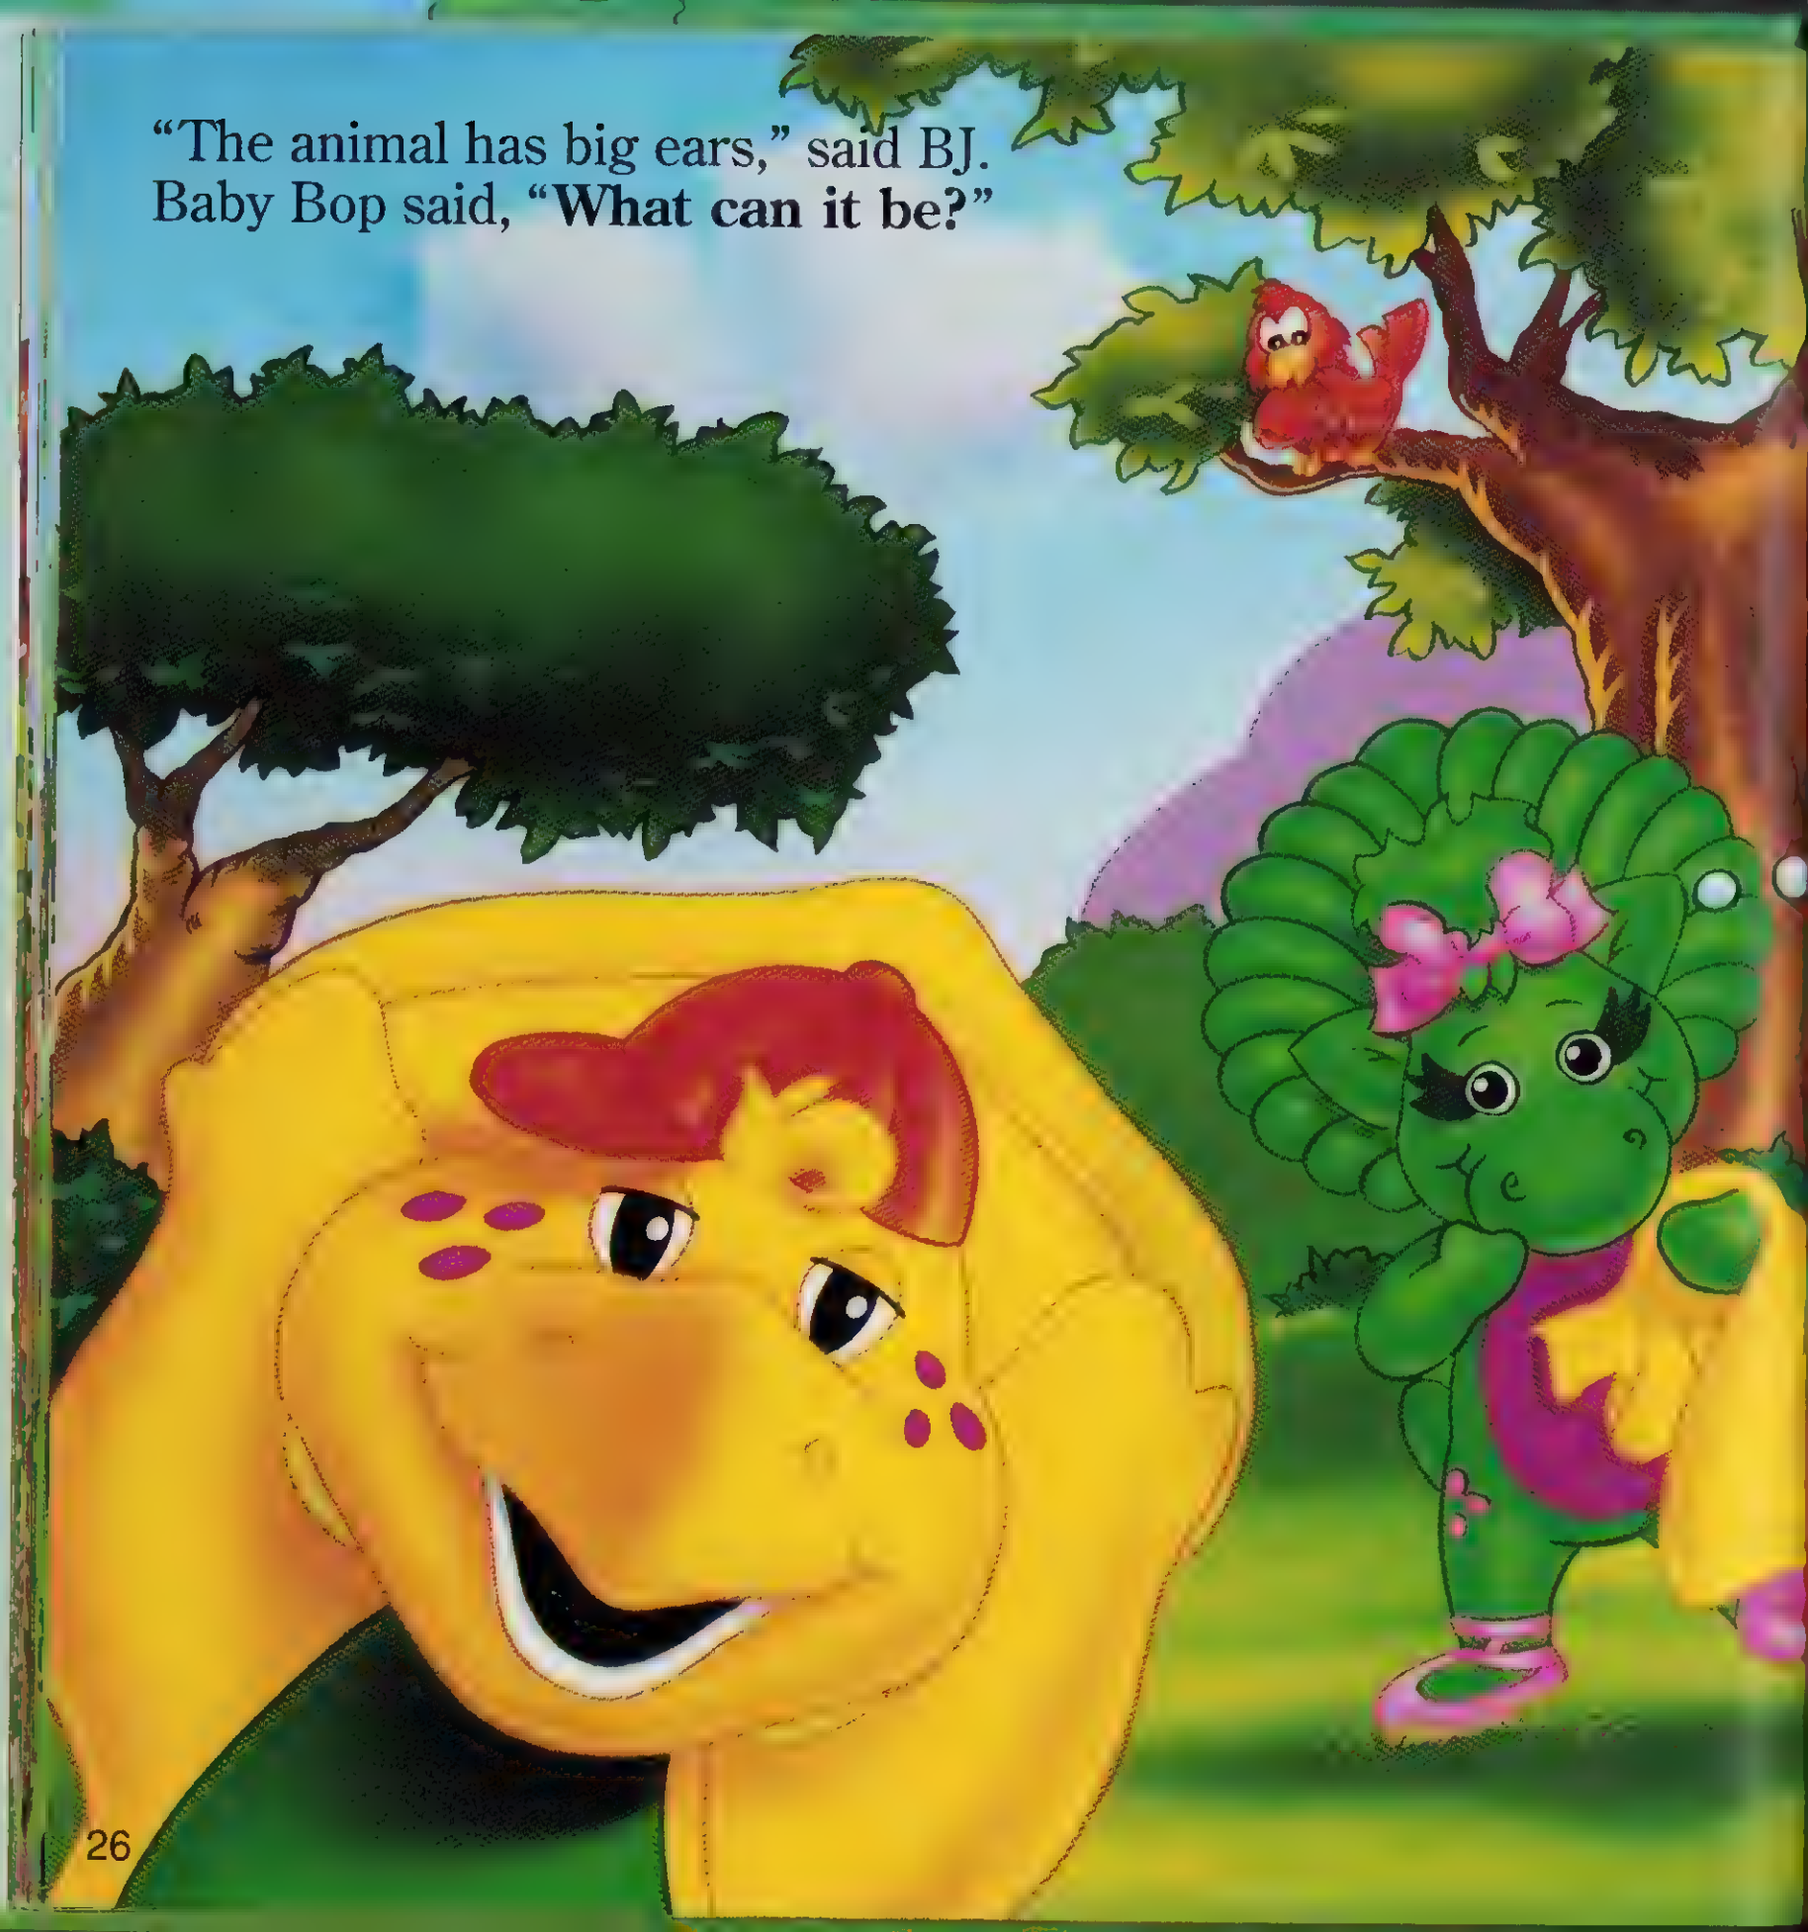
OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH-PAH!



A friendly turtle called to them.
"I saw something with big ears," she said.





"The animal has big ears," said BJ.
Baby Bop said, "What can it be?"

As BJ and Baby Bop hurried along, a deer called.

"I saw something with a big shiny horn," he said.

"Wow!" said BJ. "A big shiny horn!"
Baby Bop said, "What can it be?"

BJ and Baby Bop were in such a rush, they bumped into Barney! They told him all about the strange animal.

"That animal is part of my surprise," laughed Barney. "And here he is now!"

"It's my friend Jack Rabbit!" said Barney.
"He does have big feet.
He hopped over the bushes.
He does have big ears."

And he has a horn called a tuba that makes music like this:
OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH, OOM-PAH-PAH!"
oom pah oom pah pah!

"My surprise has music and friends.
What can it be?" asked Barney.
"It's a party!" laughed Baby Bop.
And she was right!

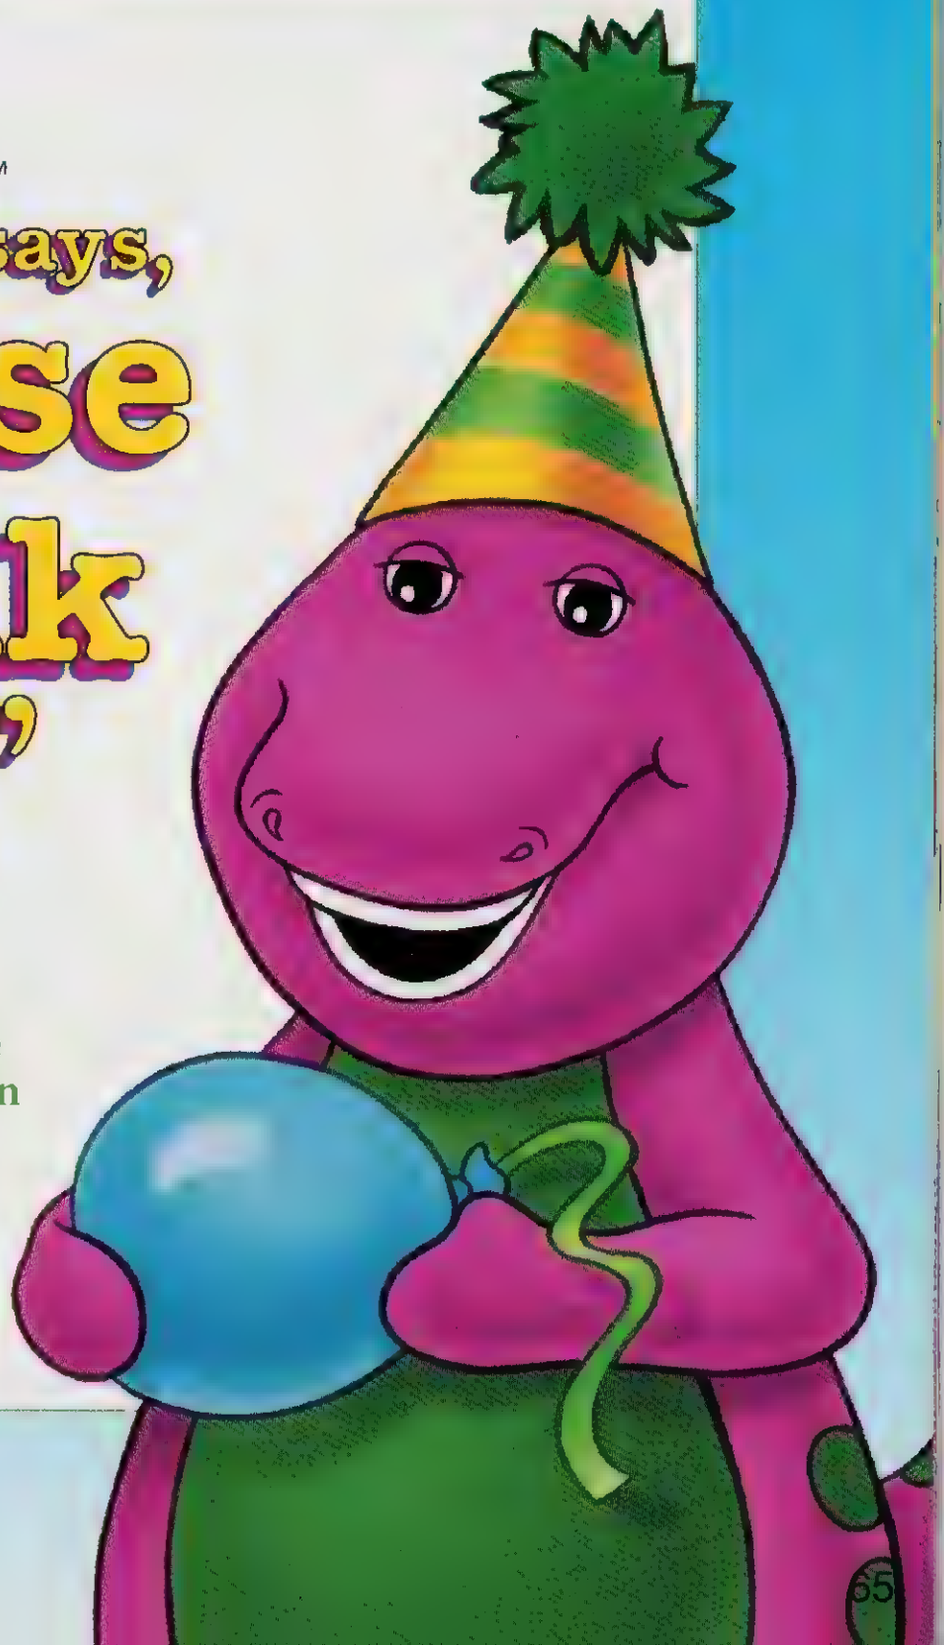
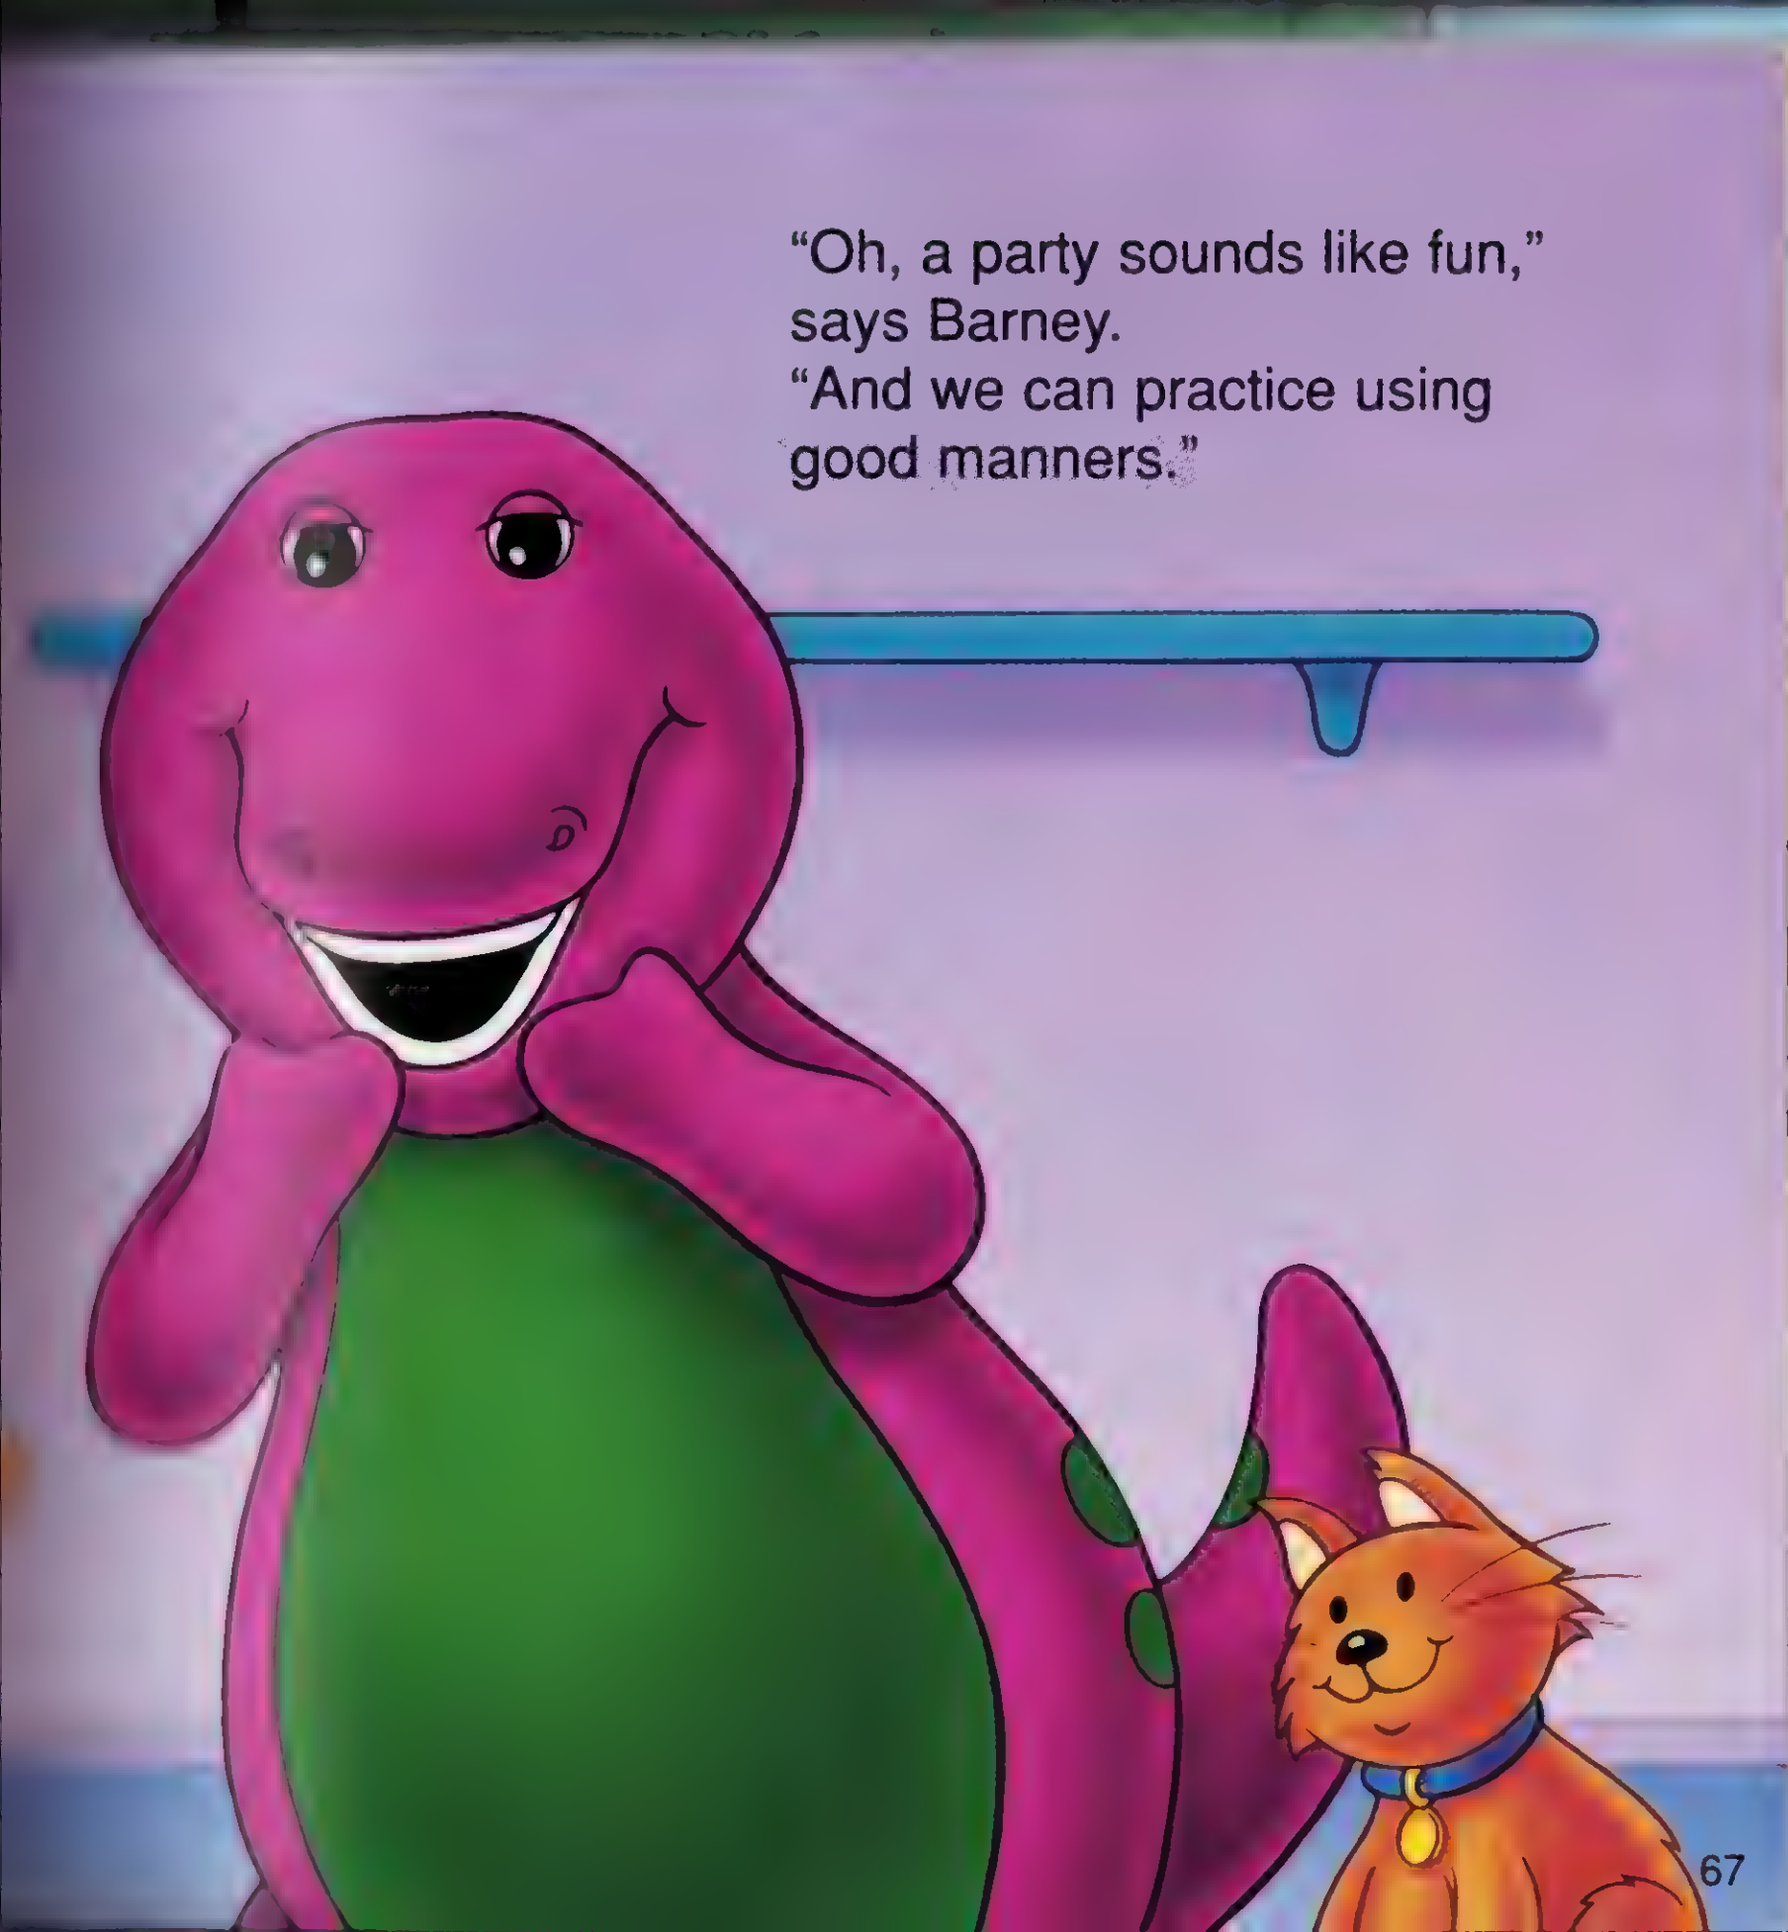
Barney™ says, "Please and Thank You"

Written by Stephen White
Illustrated by Rick Grayson



"We're going to have a party,"
says Baby Bop.
"It's Mr. Bear's make-believe birthday!"



"Oh, a party sounds like fun,"
says Barney.
"And we can practice using good manners."

"What are manners?" Baby Bop asks.
"Manners are special ways to be nice to other people," Barney tells her.

"One way to show good manners is to say 'please' and 'thank you,'" Barney says.

"Let's try now,"
Barney says happily.
"Baby Bop, will you get some party dishes...
please?"

Baby Bop brings lots of party dishes.
Barney says,
"Thank you, Baby Bop."

Baby Bop says,
"Barney, will you blow up some party balloons...please?"
"I'll be happy to,"
answers Barney.
Barney blows up all the balloons.
Baby Bop says,
"Thank you, Barney."

"Now let's make party snacks for Mr. Bear," says Barney. "Baby Bop, will you get the peanut butter...please?"

"Yes, I will," laughs Baby Bop.
Baby Bop gets a big jar of peanut butter.

Baby Bop and Barney take turns making yummy sandwiches. Barney says, “May I eat my sandwich now...please?”

Baby Bop says, "Yes, you may."
Barney doesn't say anything after that...because his mouth is full!
But after he chews and swallows, he says,
"Thank you, Baby Bop."

"Mr. Bear would like some party music,"
says Baby Bop.
"Barney, will you make some music...please?"

"Yes, I will," laughs Barney.
Barney makes lots of happy music.
Crash-bang-boom!
Baby Bop says,
"Thank you, Barney."

Barney says, “Baby Bop, would you put on a puppet show for Mr. Bear...please?”

Barney claps his hands for Baby Bop's wonderful puppet show.
Barney says,
"Thank you, Baby Bop."

"Now Mr. Bear wants to take a train ride,"
says Baby Bop.
"Barney, will you drive the train...please?"

"Here we go," Barney laughs.
"Chugga-chugga, woo-woooo!"
Baby Bop says
"Thank you, Barney."

When the train stops, Baby Bop puts her toys away.
"I hope you had fun at your party,"
Baby Bop says to Mr. Bear.
"Barney, will you help me clean the party dishes...please?"

"Of course I will,"
says Barney.
Baby Bop says,
"Thank you, Barney."

The two friends take turns washing and drying dishes.
Barney says, "Thank you for inviting me to your nice party, Baby Bop."
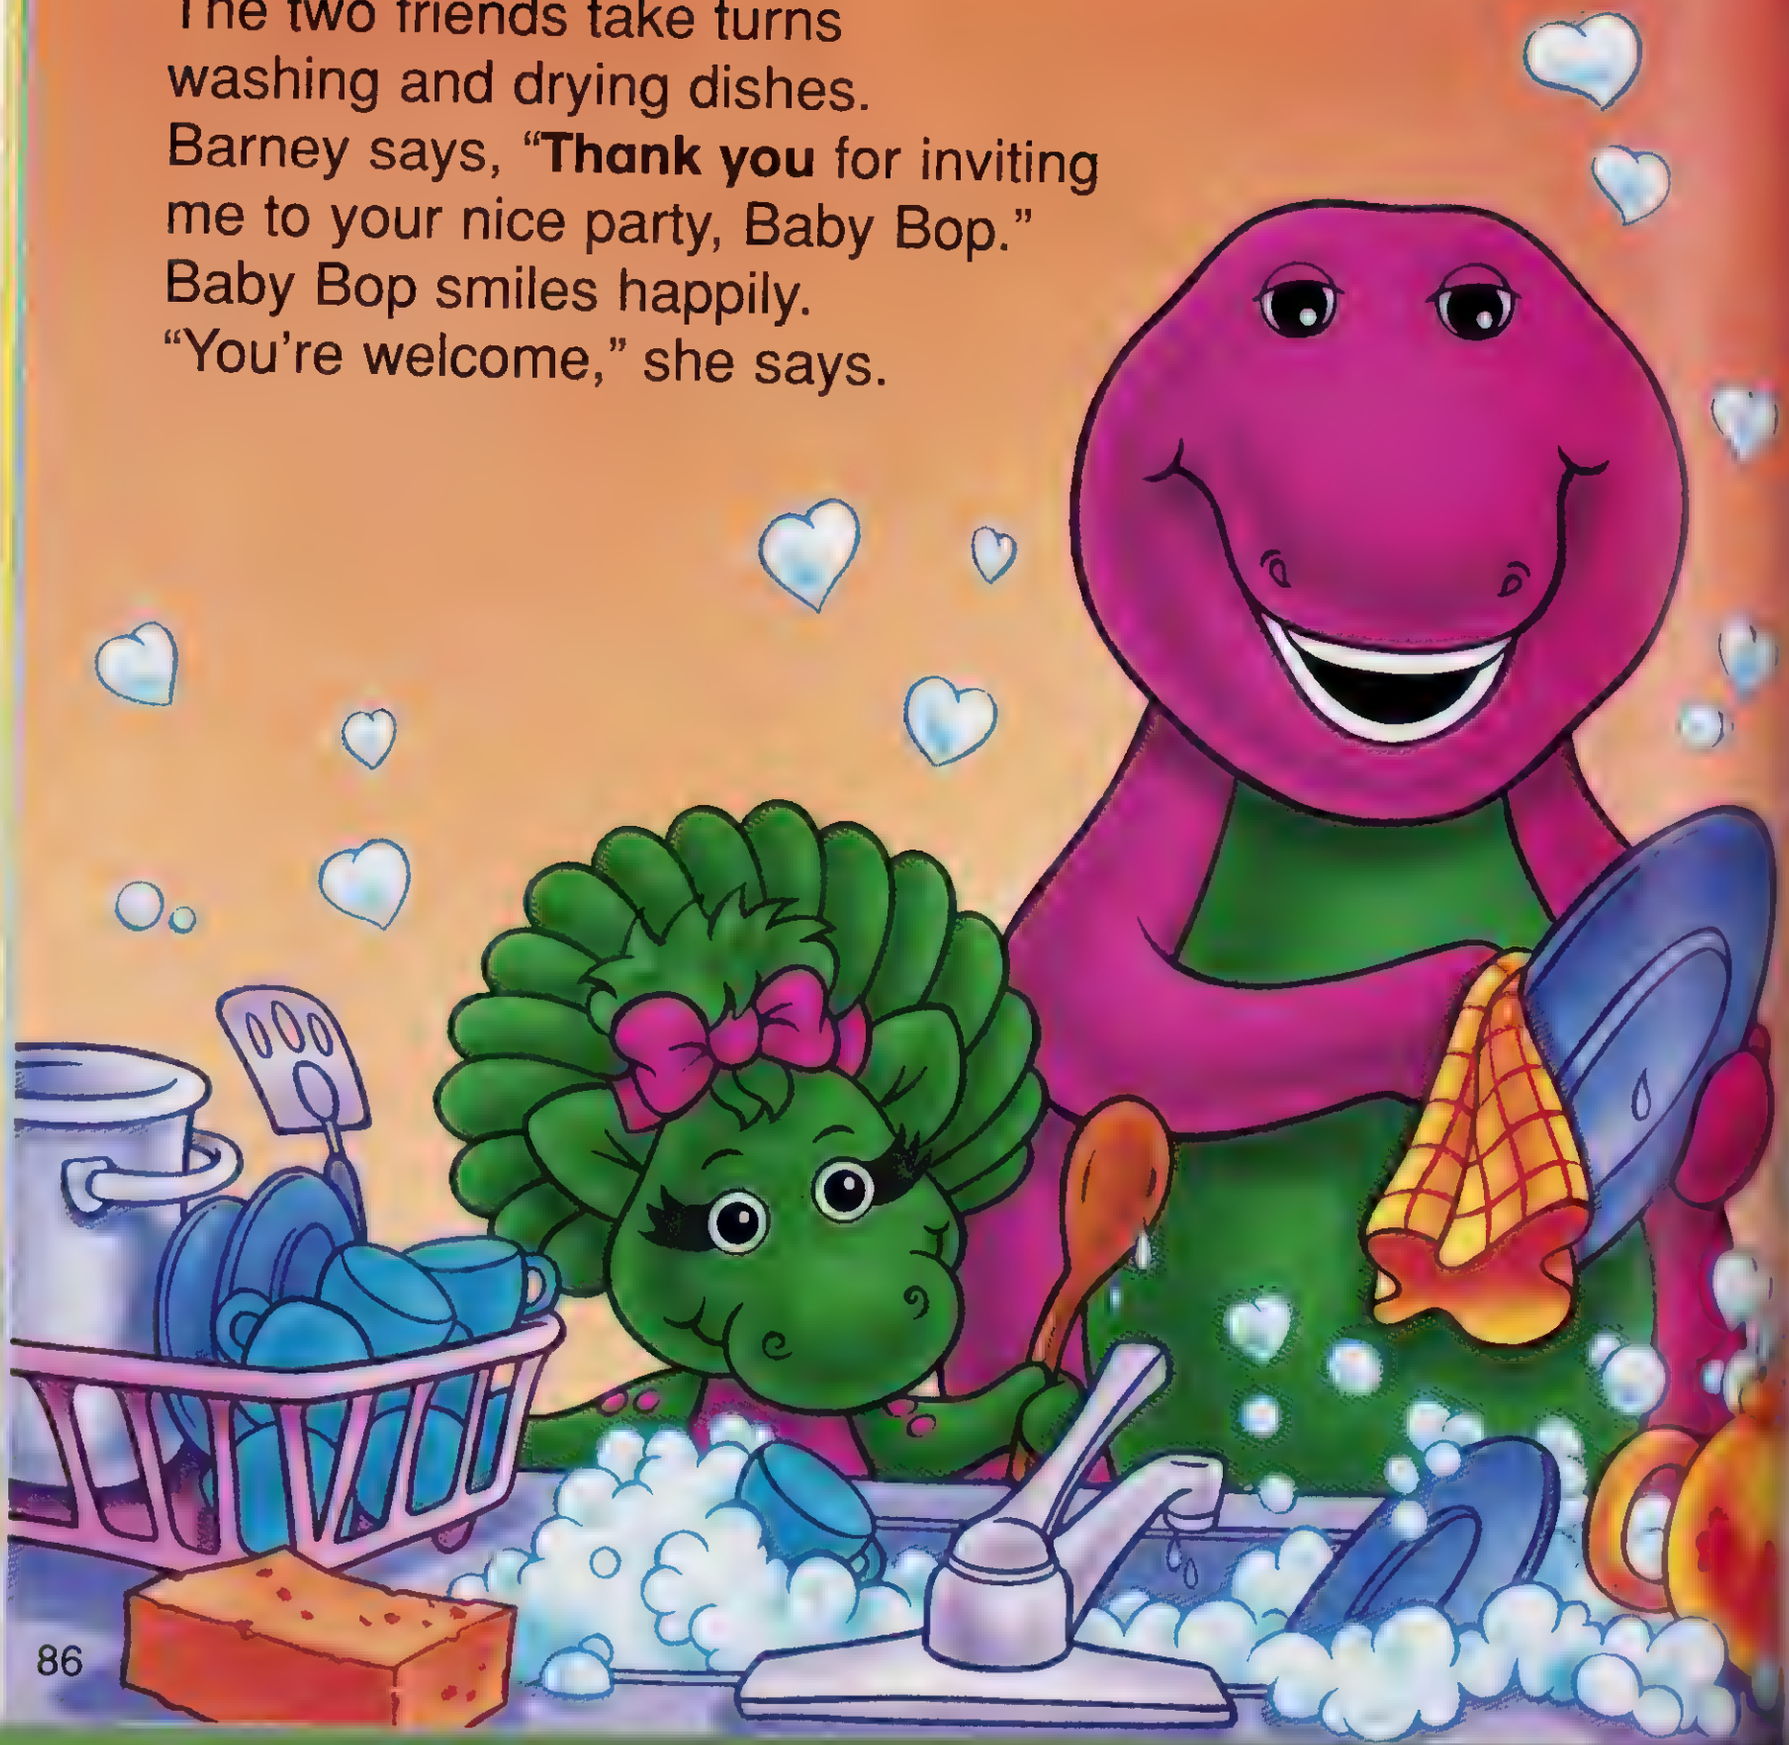
Baby Bop smiles happily.
"You're welcome," she says.



Barney™ & Baby Bop's™ Band

Written by Mark S. Bernthal
Illustrated by Alvin S. White

One sunny day, Barney and Baby Bop went to the park to play. Baby Bop pulled a little red wagon piled high with lots of musical instruments, her yellow blankey, and her favorite teddy bear.

"Oh, we're going to have such a good time here at the park!" said Barney. "It might be fun to share your musical instruments with friends, Baby Bop."

"Not today," said Baby Bop. "I'm a big girl, and I can play these all by myself. Watch me!"

"Okay, I'll sit here while you play for me," said Barney, sitting down on a park bench nearby.

"Listen to my trumpet!" said Baby Bop happily.
Then she blew on the trumpet, making a loud toot!

"I can play lots of instruments at the same time!" said Baby Bop. But when she played the trumpet and the flute together, the trumpet made a loud squawk, and the flute made a funny squeak!

Baby Bop was disappointed. “Playing the trumpet and flute together only makes a funny noise. I can’t play the drum now because my hands are full,” she said sadly.

Slowly, Baby Bop put the trumpet and flute back in the wagon. "Why did you stop playing?" asked Barney.

Baby Bop sighed. "I thought I could play all the instruments by myself. But it wasn't much fun," she said.

"If you share your musical instruments with friends you can have lots of fun!" said Barney.

Baby Bop jumped for joy. "Yes! We could all play together in a band!"

So Baby Bop and Barney set out to find friends to play in her band.

Baby Bop saw a pigeon by the big splashing fountain.
"Would you like to play in my band?" asked Baby Bop.
"I'll lend you one of my instruments."

"Certainly!" answered the pigeon.
"May I play the flute?"

So Baby Bop lent her flute to the pigeon, and she went tweetle-tweet.

Further down the path they met a brown-spotted puppy dog, and Baby Bop asked, "Would you like to play in my band? I'll lend you one of my instruments."

"I'd love to!" shouted the puppy dog.
"May I play the guitar?"

So Baby Bop lent the dog her guitar.
The pigeon went tweetle-tweet, and the puppy dog went twang-twang.

Next they found a happy squirrel near the duck pond, and Baby Bop asked, "Would you like to play in my band? I'll lend you one of my instruments."

"Yes!" said the squirrel. "May I play the trumpet?"
So Baby Bop lent the squirrel her trumpet.
The pigeon went tweetle-tweet, the puppy dog went twang-twang. and the squirrel went toot-toot.

Then Baby Bop met a fluffy kitty cat.
"Would you like to play in my band?
I'll lend you one of my instruments."

"Thank you for sharing," said the kitty cat. "May I play the drum?" So Baby Bop lent the cat her drum. The pigeon went tweetle-tweet, the puppy dog went twang-twang, the squirrel went toot-toot, and the kitty cat went ratta-tat.

Then Baby Bop asked Barney, "Would you like to play in my band? I'll lend you one of my instruments."

Barney jumped happily and said, "That would be super-dee-duper, Baby Bop!"

"Here's a trombone for you," said Baby Bop.

So Baby Bop lent Barney her trombone. The pigeon went tweetle-tweet, the puppy dog went twang-twang, the squirrel went toot-toot, the kitty cat went ratta-tat...and Barney went waah-oh-waah!

Baby Bop was so excited! "Now our band can have a parade through the park!"

But suddenly Baby Bop looked sad. "Oh, no. I've lent everybody all my instruments, and now I don't have anything to play!"

Barney reached into the wagon and lifted Baby Bop's yellow blankey. Underneath, for all to see, was another musical instrument – a shiny triangle for Baby Bop!

"Now everyone has an instrument to play," said Barney.

"We can have a parade after all!" shouted Baby Bop.

All the animals cheered, "Hooraaaaay!"

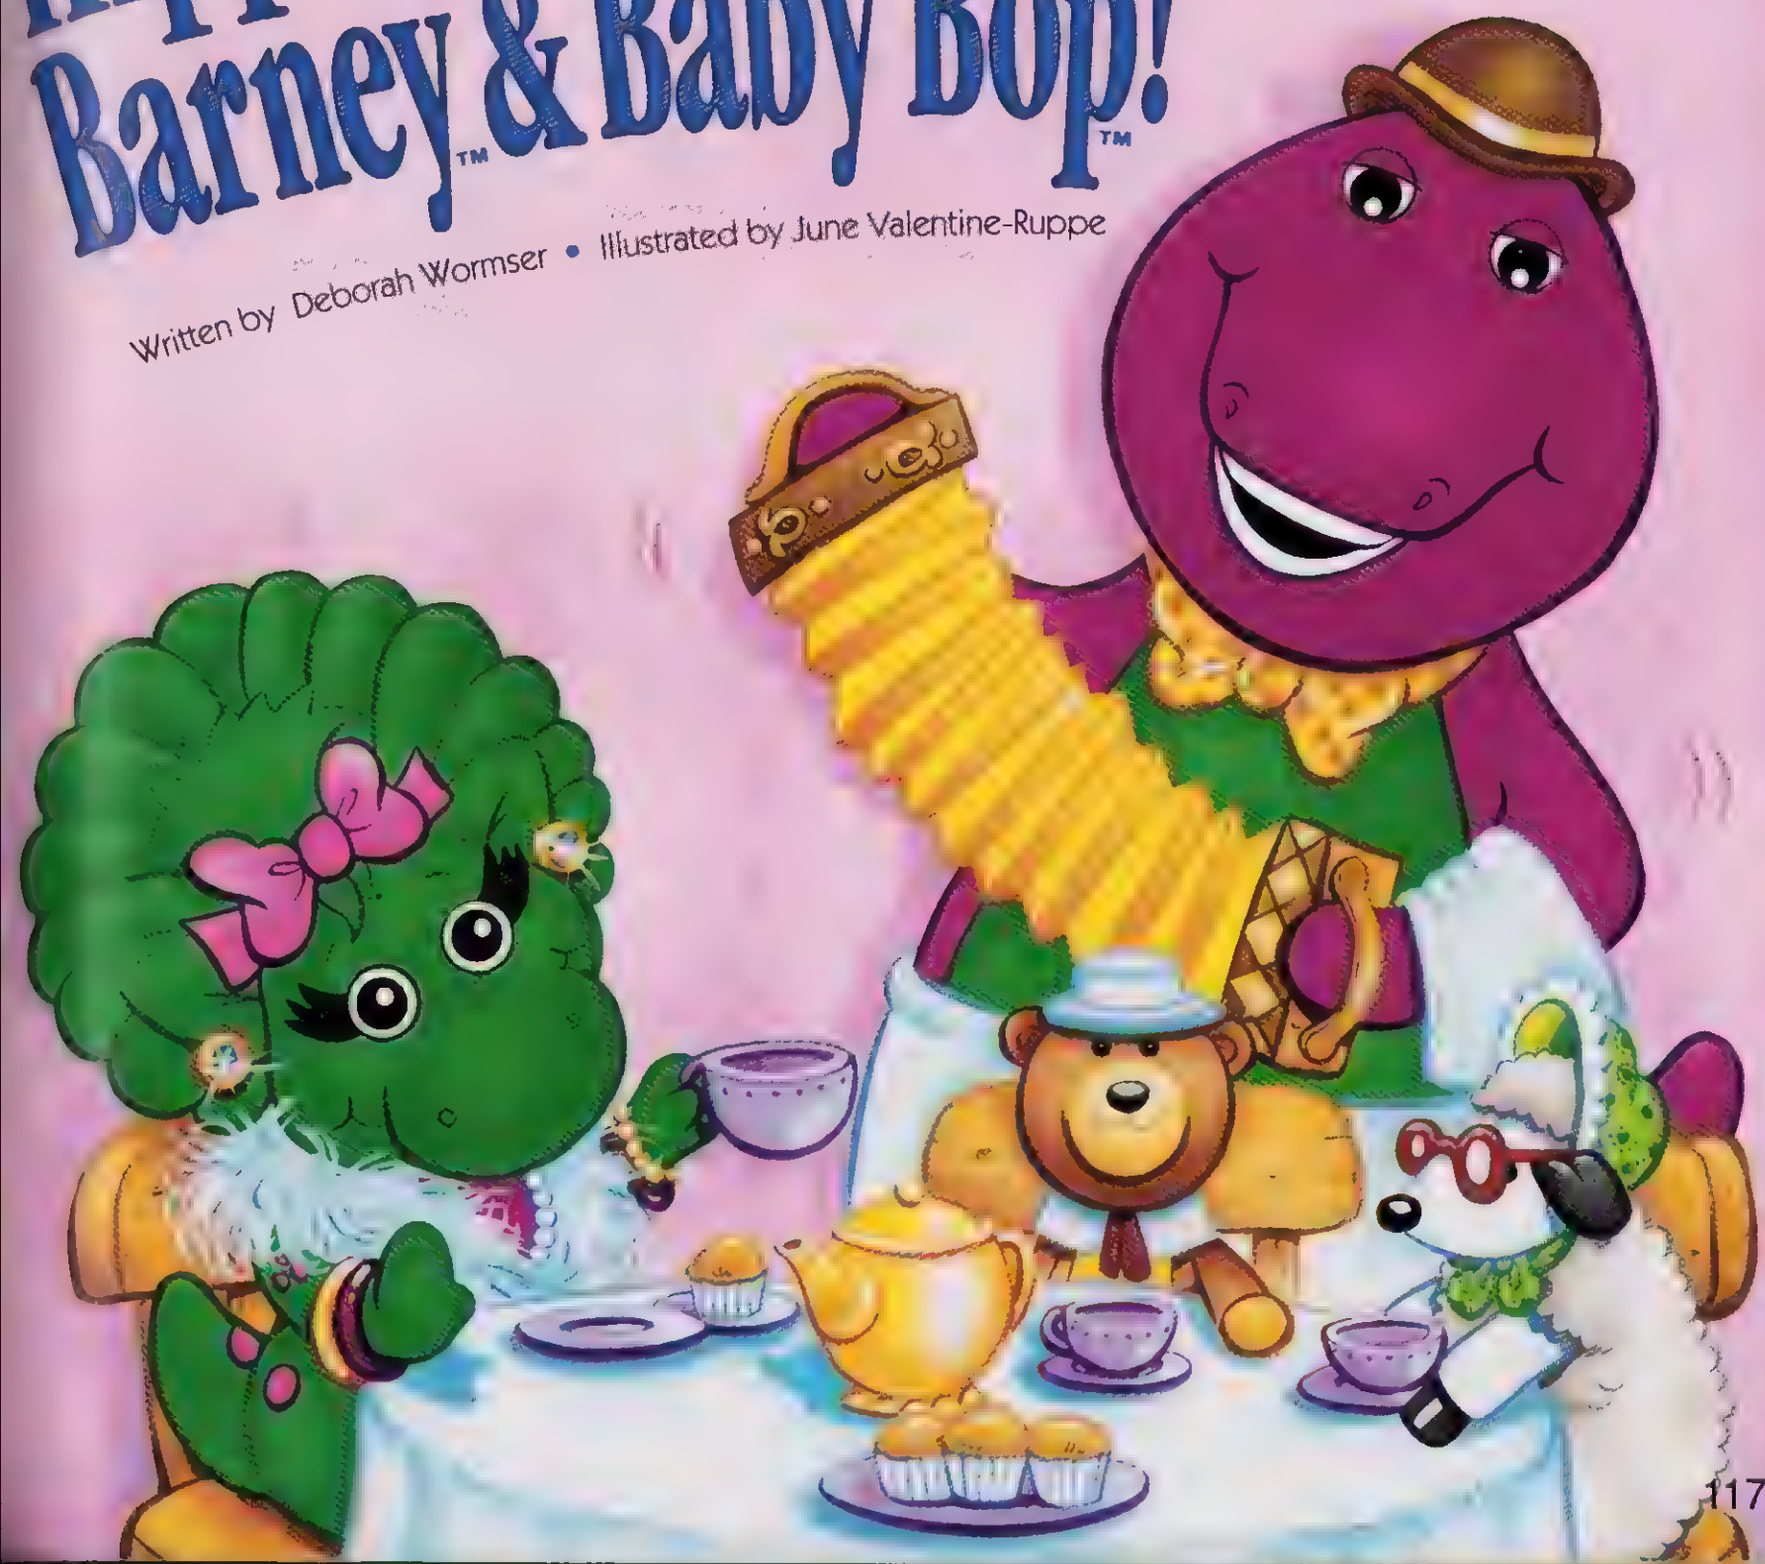
Baby Bop led her band in a parade through the park. The pigeon went tweetle-tweet, the puppy dog went twang-twang, the squirrel went toot-toot, the kitty cat went ratta-tat, Barney went waah-oh-waah, and Baby Bop went TING!

As Barney and Baby Bop left the park at the end of the day, Baby Bop was very happy.

"You were right, Barney," she said. "When I share with my friends, playing is lots more fun!"

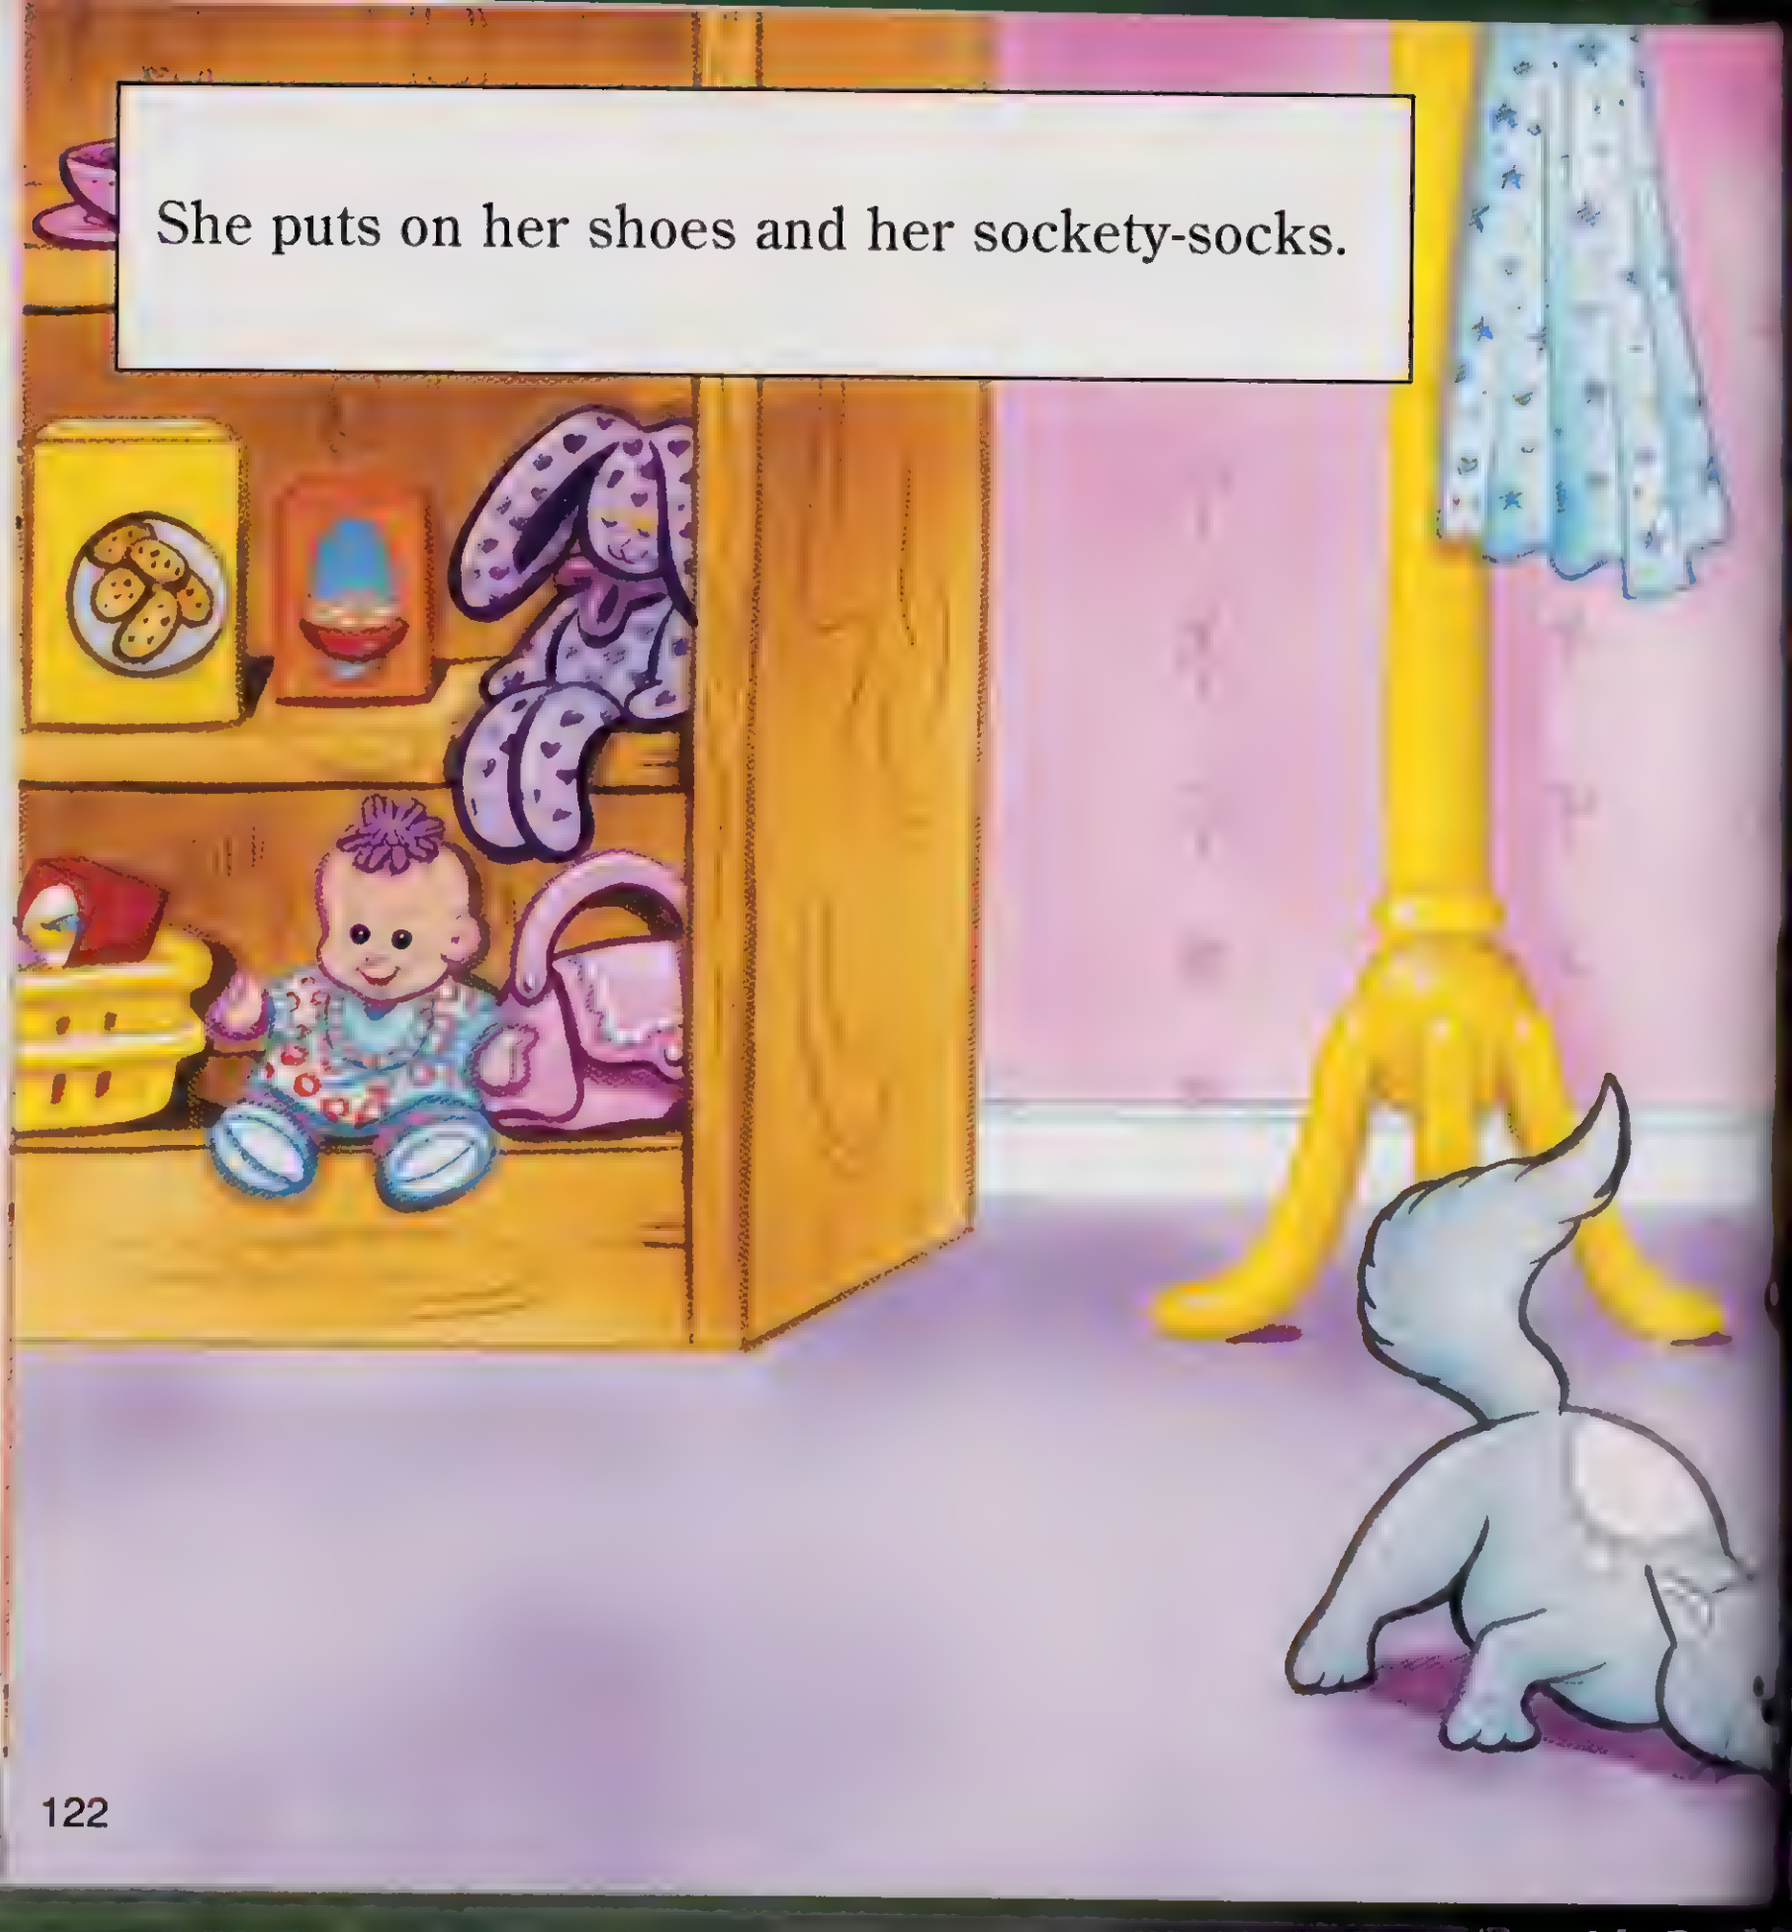
Hippity Hop, It's Barney™ & Baby Bop!™

Written by Deborah Wormser • Illustrated by June Valentine-Ruppe



Here's Baby Bop, Baby Boppity-Bop.
She jumps in the air with a hippity-hop.

She rides on her horse with a rockety-rock.



She puts on her shoes and her sockety-socks.

She puts on her hat with a ratta-tat-tat,

ل

And pets the cat with a patty-pat-pat.

She plays outside on her trikety-trike
With her brother BJ who she likety-likes.

At the make-believe store with her carty-cart-cart
She's ready for the fun to starty-start-start.

She helps clean the floor with a moppity-mop,

And stands on her toes to dust the toppity-top.

She brings out her dolls, and they all wait to see,
What Baby Boppity-Bop is making for tea.

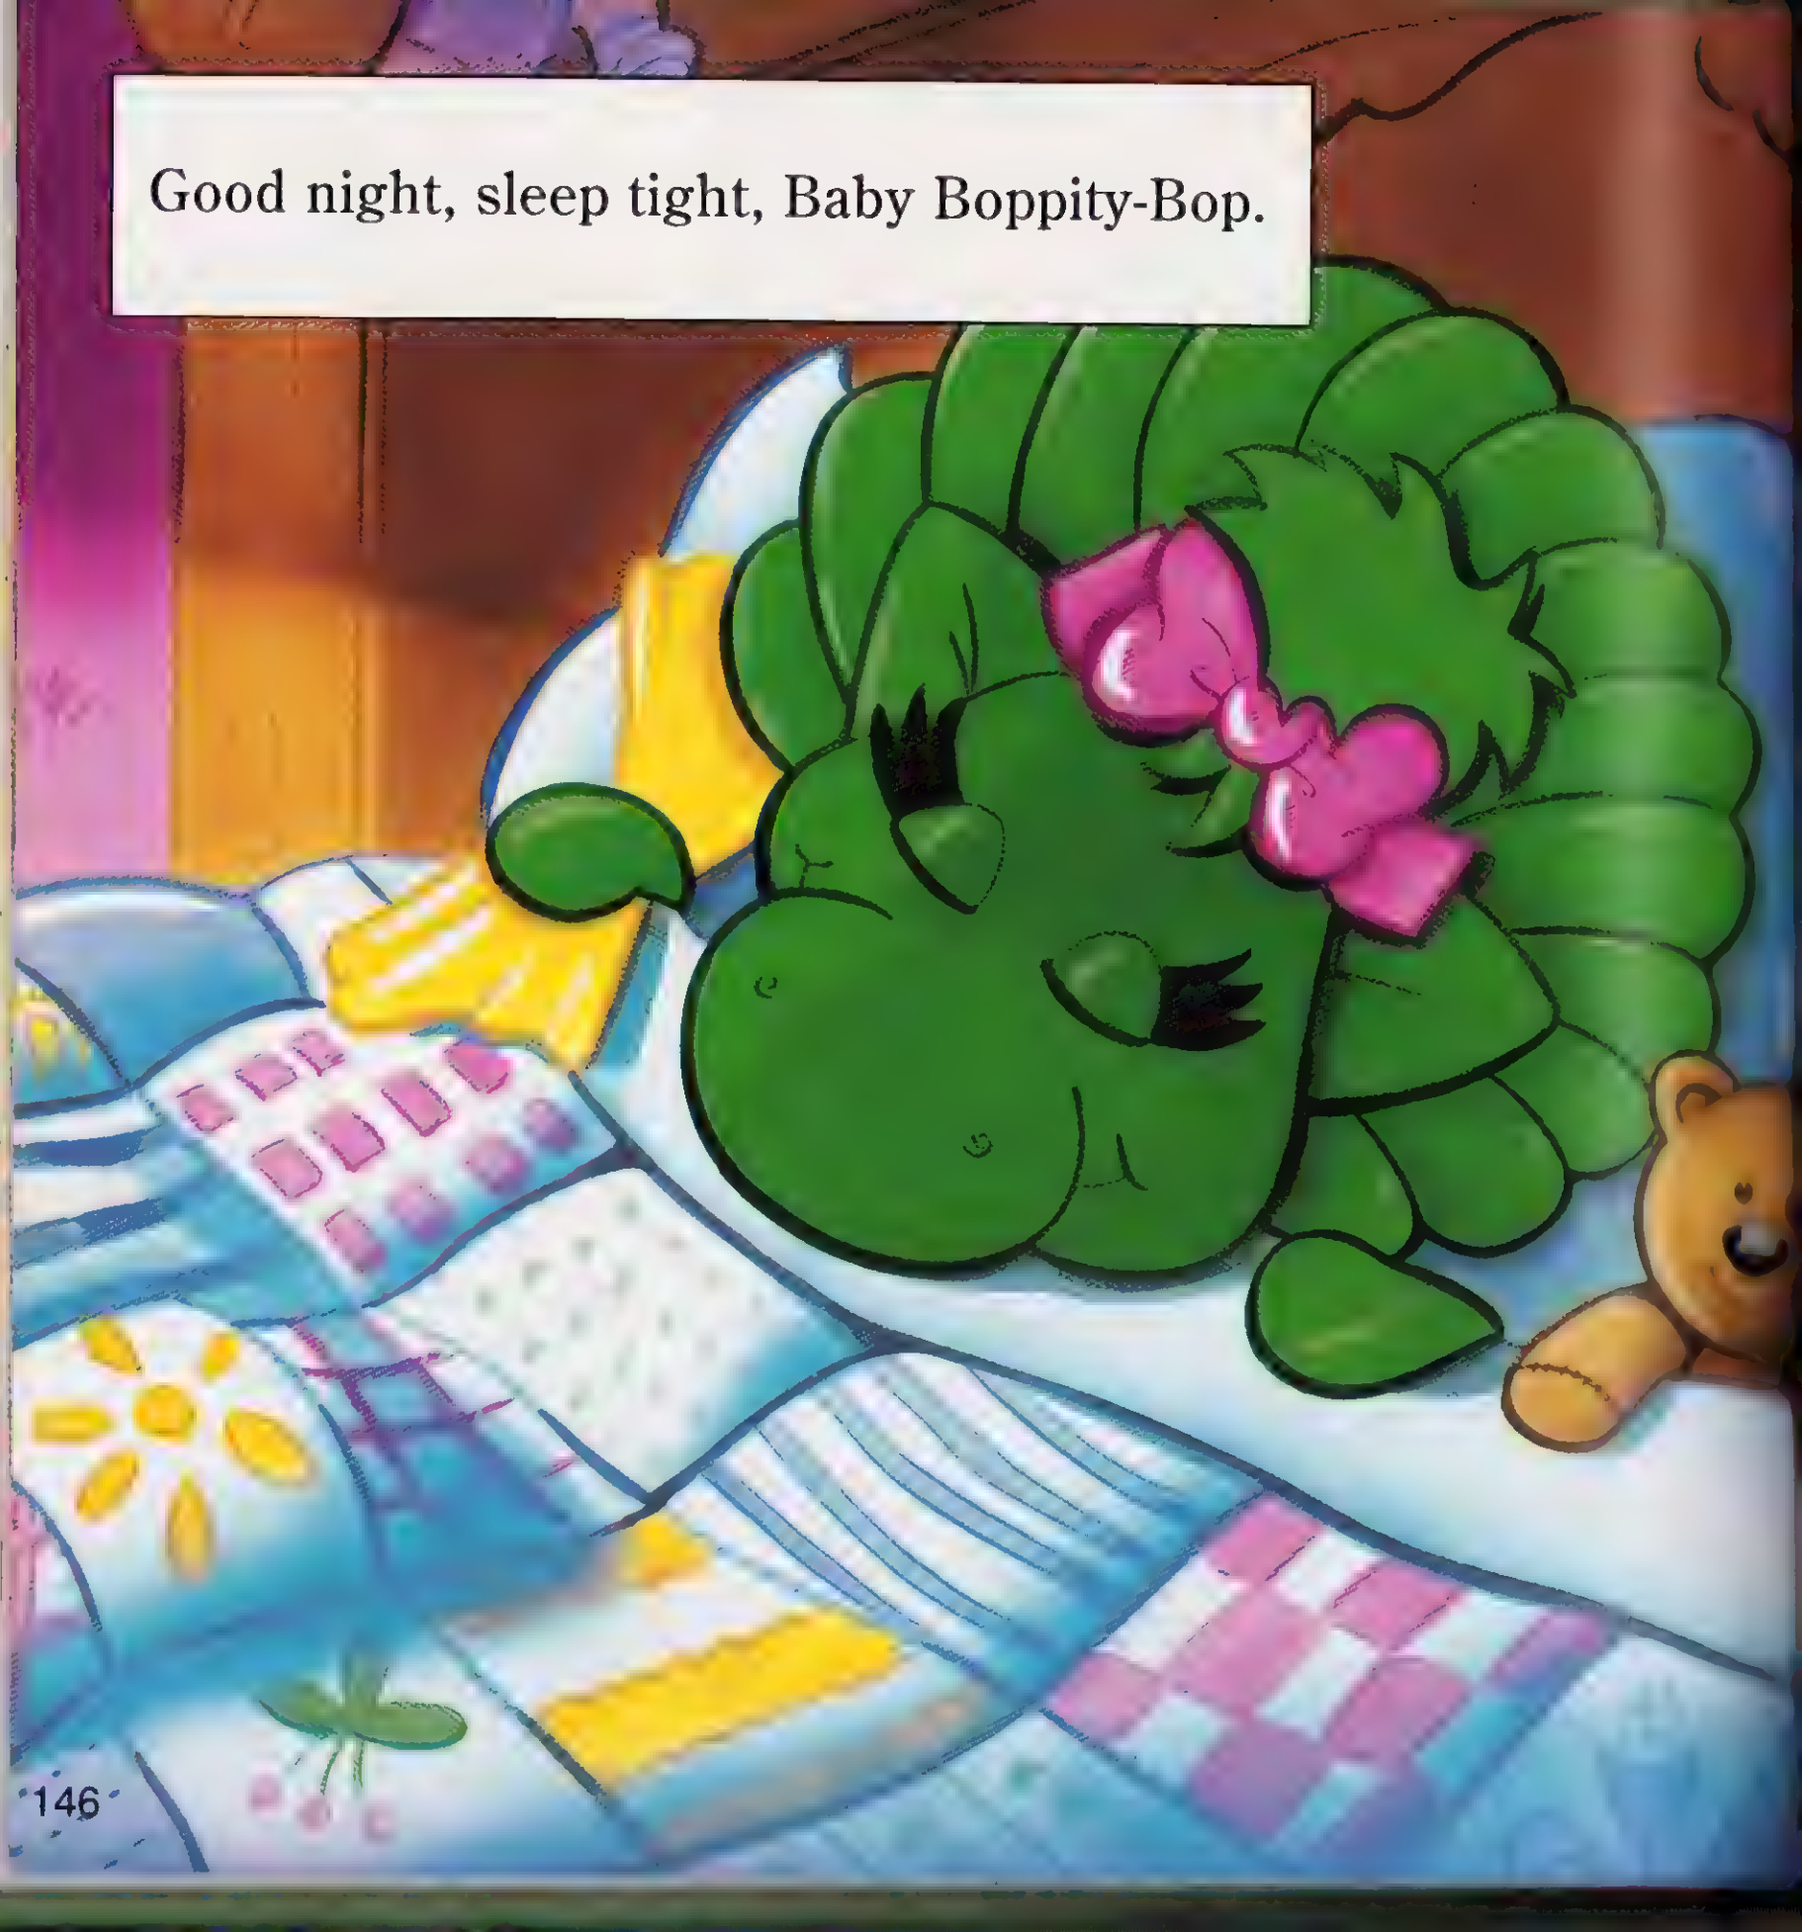
There are make-believe muffins with jammy-jam-jam
And sweet, green grass for the lamby-lamb-lamb.

She stirs the tea with a spoony-spoon-spoon,
While her friend Barney plays a tuney-tune-tune.

Now she's so tired she could droppity-drop.
It must be time to stoppity-stop.

She brushes her teeth with a brushy-brush-brush,

And hears her bedtime stories in night's hushy-hush-hush.



Good night, sleep tight, Baby Boppity-Bop.

Barney's™ Wonderful Winter Day

Written by Stephen White
Illustrated by Bill Langley

One winter morning, Baby Bop rubbed her hand across a frosty window. "Oh, look!" she called to Barney and her brother, BJ. "It snowed last night!"

"Great!" said BJ. "Can we go out and play, Barney?"

"Sure!" laughed Barney. "First we'll put on our warmest clothes, then we can play outside until you feel cold from your nose to your toes!"

"Oh boy!" said Barney as he stepped outside. "There's snow everywhere."

"We can pretend we're on top of a big white cloud," BJ laughed.

"Brrr," said Baby Bop with a happy shiver. "It's a cold cloud."

"We'll feel warmer when we start having fun," said Barney.

"Good!" said BJ. "And we can keep having fun until we feel cold from our nose to our toes!"

BJ took a big breath, then blew it out again, making a tiny cloud in the frosty air. "Look! I'm pretending to be a fire-breathing dragon," laughed BJ.

Then he roared another little white cloud into the air.

Baby Bop scooped up a handful of snow and patted it into a ball. "Watch me throw!" she called.

Baby Bop tossed the snowball just as far as she could. It flew through the air, then burst into a shower of snowflakes when it hit the ground.

"Is anyone cold from their nose to their toes?" Barney asked.

"I'm not cold," said BJ.

"I'm not cold," said Baby Bop.

"Then I'll go get a surprise," said Barney.

"I wonder what the surprise will be?" asked Baby Bop.
Then BJ and Baby Bop heard two new sounds.

"I hear something that goes clop-clop-clop," said BJ.

"And I hear something that goes jingle-jingle," said Baby Bop.

Then BJ and Baby Bop saw Barney's surprise.

"It's a horse," said BJ.

"With real bells," said Baby Bop.

"It's a horse-drawn sleigh!" laughed Barney.
"And those are called sleigh bells."

"Can we go for a ride?" asked Baby Bop.

"Just hop in," said Barney. "We're going to a park where we can play lots of winter games."

Barney, BJ, and Baby Bop rode through the snowy hills and valleys. Some of the forest animals heard the clop-clop and jingle-jingle sounds and followed along to see what was happening.

"I think we have some new friends," Baby Bop giggled.

Barney smiled at the little animals.

"It's always nice to make new friends," he said.

"I want to make a snow angel," said Baby Bop. Then she lay down and spread her arms and legs back and forth through the snow.

"See?" she giggled. "A snow angel!"

When Baby Bop was finished, Barney asked,
"Is anyone cold from their nose to their toes?"

"Not me," called BJ.

"Not me, too," called Baby Bop.

"Then I guess we can keep playing," laughed Barney.

Next, Barney and his friends decided to try skiing. "With these skis on our feet, we can slide down a snowy hill," said Barney.

"That sounds like fun!" said BJ.

But Baby Bop wasn't so sure. "I'm a little scared," she whispered to Barney.

Barney said nicely, "I know a little hill that's just right for a little friend like you."

And he really did.

"Whee!" said Baby Bop.

After that, Barney, BJ, and Baby Bop all rode on sleds. They went swoosh down a big hill, spraying bright sprinkles of snow into the air.

"Yes!" Baby Bop giggled.

"Wow!" BJ shouted.

"Super-dee-duper!" laughed Barney.

"It's time for us to go back," said Barney. "Is anyone cold from their nose to their toes?"

"My nose is cold, but not my toes," said Baby Bop.

"My toes are cold, but not my nose," laughed BJ.

"Then I guess we can keep playing when we get to the cabin," said Barney.

Soon everyone was riding back through the snowy woods.

Clop-clop! Jingle-jingle!

"When we get back, maybe we can build some snowmen," BJ said.

"And maybe some snow girls," giggled Baby Bop.

"That will be fun!" said Barney. "And I saw a box of old clothing that we could use to dress our snow people."

Back at the cabin, Barney took the horse to the barn. BJ and Baby Bop waited outside, listening to all of the nice winter sounds.

"I can hear the wind whistling," said BJ, "just like I whistle when I'm happy." BJ whistled a little tune, and the wind whistled it right back!

"I can hear music," said Baby Bop. "I think it must be some little bells."

But it was just the sound of icy branches going tinkle, tinkle, tinkle in the winter wind.

"Now I hear a sound like my toy drum," said BJ. "Rat-a-tat-tat!"

"That's not a drum," laughed Barney. "Those are drops of water falling from the icicles."

Then Barney heard another sound. It chattered and clattered in the cold air.

"Uh-oh," Barney said with a smile. "I think that's the sound of teeth chattering when little friends get cold from their noses to their toes."

And he was right!

"It's time to go inside to warm up," said Barney.

"B-b-but we didn't get to make snowmen yet," said BJ with a shiver.

"And if we g-g-go inside, our new friends will be lonely," said Baby Bop.

Barney thought for just a moment. Then he smiled and said, "I think I have an idea that will make everyone happy."

He whispered the idea to BJ and Baby Bop.

Then Barney, BJ, and Baby Bop started making something out of the snow. They rolled the snow into balls. They patted it here and pushed it there, stuck a little bit on, and brushed a little bit off.

"This is a good idea!" said Baby Bop.

"I really liked making snow friends," BJ said.

"And our friends like them too," Baby Bop giggled.

"Now, who wants some hot chocolate on a cold winter day?" asked Barney

And do you know what? They all did!
